THE CHRISTMAS SALE.

The object of the Annual Christmas Sale held in the Confederation Life Building corner Richmond and Yonge streets, is well known. The Sisters of the Precious Blood, for whose benefit the sale is held, have led their unostentatious lives of prayer and good works in our midst for some twenty-five years. In sorrow and trouble they have comforted many hearts, while to their prayers many ascribe the spiritual benefits and even temporal favors granted them. The annual sale is held to pay off the debt contracted in building the present monastery. The ladies who have it in charge may be relied upon to make it even a greater success than ever. In addition to a grand display of fancy-work, novelties of all kinds, there will be a unique collection of decorated china. Concerts by the very best talent will be given each evening during the sale, of which particulars will be given later. Handsome prizes are to be given away every evening and on Saturday, Nov. 30, Santa Claus will anticipate his usual date and distribute from a huge Christmas tree gifts to every child. The sale opens at luncheon hour, on Monday, Nov. 25, when a recherche luncheon will be served. The sale will close Saturday evening, Nov. 30. Luncheon and tea will be served every day and arrangement can be made for suppers, five o'clock teas, etc. Look for further particulars next week.

MGR. LAURENT, DIED OCT. 31, 1901.

The tears of his people fall fast on the bier,
For the hand of the Lord is upon them;
And bowed down with sorrow, with anguish and fear,
They gaze on the home that's beyond them;
The face of their pastor has lost its life bloom,
His voice is now silent and still;
Its form that they cherished is fit for the tomb,
His soul has gone out at God's will.

Yet why should we murmur, from him that we part?
Who showed us the way should be trod;
And who bore through life's burdens a kind trusting heart
In the merciful love of his God;
Who in youth and in manhood one object alone
Had sought without favor or gain;
To live for his God, and for sin to atone
And Heaven's high glory attain.

No base thought of self ever clouded his soul,
No struggle too hard or too weary;
No work overgreat that would lead to the goal
Some poor wandering heart that was dreary.

Many wounded and sore has he found by the way,
And from shoulders the burden has taken;
Many groping in darkness he's brought to the day,
Who through sin the true path had forsaken.

He has lead his loved children with fatherly hand
Up the hill where science abides,
And taught them that knowledge and truth alone stand
In the mind where religion resides.

Ever urging, e'er helping them strength to acquire
In all that was noble and great,
He accomplished in life his one grand desire,
His lesson—to labor and wait.

In the close of the year, in the church that he loved,
Closed the door of his earthly life's day;
May the dawn of the Saints, God's chosen beloved,
Shine on him and show him the way —
To the home he has carved on the great book of life,
To the foot of the throne of the King;
To that rest of the weary, that follows the strife,
And where angels God's praises shall sing.

Dead bells shall toll for our Father that's gone
To join the fond friends of his youth;
But behind him the light of his virtue hath shone
With holiness, justice and truth.
Then let misereres our rosaries tell,
Take in mercy, O Lord! our good priest;
May his purity, love, and kindness to all,
Be the garment he'll wear at the Feast. K.M.O'L.

AN EASY WAY OF MAKING A DOLLAR.

The Register will give one dollar cash as a premium to the person who will obtain the best bargain from any of the advertisers in this week's issue of The Catholic Register.

All you have to do is to read over our columns, correspond with or buy direct from any of our advertisers (mentioning this paper), and forward a copy of your receipted bill with a description of the article purchased to us.

We will examine the list of sales and award the prize to the person whom we will consider to have obtained the best bargain.

It does not matter if the bargain be not obtained personally. A purchase by a relative will entitle you to compete. All we require is a copy of the receipted bill, made out in your relative's name. Allowance will be made for out-of-town purchasers.

The winner's name will be announced in The Catholic Register of 21st November.

A Costly Wedding.

Wealth, after all, is but a relative term, and the canny Scot affords the latest proof of it. "One man may be passing rich on £40 a year," says a writer in a Glasgow newspaper, "and another may be miserably poor on £400. This was beautifully illustrated to me the other day, when, driving past a popular Ayrshire 'place of drinks,' I was hailed from the roadside by a man who claimed friendship on the strength of 'living next door when we were boys.' He was getting married, he said, and on that, I suppose, was feeling unusually happy. 'Man, come on in and let me staun you something,' he said. 'Don't think I've nae money. There's a pound note. Would you believe it, no' a week sin' I had hale three pounds, but what wi' buying furniture and things I've spent the ither twa. Aye, and afore the wadden's ower, I believe that pound'll be melted tae. By gore, gettin' married's the thing to rin awa wi' siller. But come on in and hae a drink.'"

The Coronation Organist.

At the coming coronation of King Edward there are many perquisites in connection with the appropriation of which there is sure to be much merriment in the newspapers and some trouble in domestic circles. The service will be held in Westminster Abbey, and one of the perquisites here is the beautiful organ, which has been "claimed" by the officiating organist at the last four coronations, and possession of the instrument has been amply compensated for. "The organist at the coronation service," says The London Chronicle, "will probably receive a check for £500 in settlement of all claims, and naturally the question is who will be the lucky man to be appointed to the post. Since the coronation of George III., the composer to the Chapel Royal has always superseded the regular organist at the Abbey, and at the late Queen's, Sir George Smart was appointed over the head of Turle. The present composer to the Chapel Royal, and organist at St. James' Palace, is Dr. William Creser, and people are wanting to know if he will exercise his rights and oust Sir Frederick Bridge from the Abbey organ loft next June."

Telegraphing at Sea.

Marconi still continues to make progress with his instruments for wireless telegraphy. The latest feat accomplished by the improved instruments installed on the Cunard Liners was in locating the Lucania the other day, while cautiously feeling her way through a dense fog off Sandy Hook. The result showed that the difficulties of communicating with vessels lying in port, on account of high buildings, iron roofs, masts and the like, had been overcome by the superior construction of the new instrument.

The operator of the Lucania also reported a very successful "talk" with the company's liner the Campania, which passed at midnight, on October 8, when the two steamers were in mid-ocean. From 11.05 o'clock on Tuesday evening until 5.15 o'clock the next morning, approximately six hours and ten minutes, the two steamers, speeding on through the darkness, with a strong westerly gale blowing, were in communication. After Captain McKay of the Lucania had asked of Captain Walker of the Campania the condition of the weather through which the latter had passed, this message was received :—"We experienced some rain and fog on the Banks, and have seen no ice. All well and happy." Three messages were received from passengers on the Campania, to be retransmitted when the Lucania arrived off the Nantucket Shoals Lightship. This was duly done as the liner sped by the station. For more than 140 miles the operators on the two liners communicated with each other, which is, so far, the record telegraphing distance on the sea.

The Foremost Game Birds.

Says a sportsman of the gun, writing in an American contemporary the other day, of our two great autumn game birds :—

"But of all our game birds, the foremost are unquestionably the Bob White and the ruffled grouse, both of which are common permanent residents throughout their range, which extends from the northern United States to the Gulf of Mexico. The clear, ringing whistle of the Bob White is known to everyone, and the bird at times becomes strangely familiar. Last June the writer heard and saw it in an apple tree in a village garden, with houses on every side, yet when hunted it develops a cunning which frequently outwits its persecutor and sends the best shot home empty-handed. These affectionate creatures do not abandon their young as soon as they are able to shift for themselves, but they keep together, if spared by the gunners, until the mating season comes again. It is stated that 'a sole survivor has been known to wander about the country a whole winter, calling mournfully and almost incessantly for the missing brothers and sisters until the farmer again took up his gun and put the mourner out of misery.' Instead of perching, a bevy of Bob Whites will huddle together on the ground with heads outward—'a living bomb whose explosion is scarcely less startling than that of dynamite manufacture.'

"The ruffled grouse is the emblem of the League of American Sportsmen, whose President says of it :—'The ruffled grouse, by reason of its sudden bursts from cover, its bold, strong, swift flight, the rugged nature of its favorite cover, its proud, erect carriage, its handsome garb, and its wide distribution, is easily the king of American game birds.' The drumming of the ruffled grouse is one of the most characteristic sounds in nature. Mr. Bradford Torrey argues against the wisdom of a bird 'whose notion of a lover's serenade is the beating of a drum,' but once try to shoot one in the woods when it whirrs off with a startling, thunderous rush of wings in a course which so often discomfits the keenest marksman, and your opinion of its general ability will rise several stages. You will thereafter readily believe what Thoreau says of its eyes: 'All intelligence seems reflected in them. They suggest not merely the purity of infancy, but a wisdom clarified by experience. Such an eye was not born when the bird was, but is coeval with the sky it reflects.' An eye like that might well outface the bald eagle, the somewhat ill-chosen emblem of the republic, which is, after all, only a piratical parasite and a scavenger."

"I wonder if anybody's as unlucky as I am," grumbled the first pessimist. "I never have any luck at all."

"Huh!" snorted the other, "you're lucky. It's better to never have any luck at all than to be always having bad luck like me."—Philadelphia Press.

Trade was a little better to-day at the Toronto Cattle Market. The quality of the offerings showed some improvement almost all round, and in some cases the demand picked up appreciably. Export cattle, which have been inactive for some weeks, showed signs of much improvement to-day and prices were well advanced. Some of the exporters offered were the best which have been offered here for a long time, and they were quickly bought up at a high figure. Butchers' cattle were just a shade higher and were very firm. The demand for good butchers' is strong, and when offered they sold well. They have improved also in the quality of the offerings, so that the sellers are able to maintain good prices. Feeding cattle continue unchanged and in good demand. The offerings are becoming heavier in weight now, but the demand is for still heavier animals. Stockers were selling steadily at unchanged prices. Milch cows were in good demand and the offerings were of excellent quality, practically no poor ones coming. Sheep were firm and in good demand for export. There is no demand for culls. Butchers' Cattle—Were a little stronger, netting an advance of about 10c per cwt. Picked lots will bring $4 to $4.40 per cwt.

Feeding Cattle—The demand continued strong. Steers bring $3.25 to $3.60 per cwt and bulls $2.50 to $3.25 per cwt.
