

KNOWING THE GROUND RULES

EXPORT REGULATIONS AND STANDARDS

A solid understanding of export regulations and standards is an important prerequisite for success in the global marketplace. This is the kind of knowledge that can save you time and money, and give you an important edge over the competition. The following services are specifically designed to help you "navigate the regs."

The Automated Customs Information Service (ACIS) lets you access general import and export customs information 24 hours a day.

Common standards for products and services are an important part of the trade process, and a growing number of smaller Canadian companies are using quality management standards to win the confidence of overseas clients. The co-ordinating body of Canada's National Standards System, the Standards Council of Canada (SCC), can provide you with the information you need to carry out your business both at home and abroad. If you're a small or medium-sized company, the SCC can help you to establish your own strategic approach to standardization.
