

George Edison, a cousin of Thomas Edison, the inventor. She has two children, a son and a daughter. She resides in Grand Rapids, Mich., and often visits her Stanbridge home.

Gardner Stanton and wife, Helen, daughter of Mr. Morency Gardner, of Stanbridge, are living on the Stanton Farm on Stanbridge Ridge. They, too, have lost an only child, and have borne it with the same resignation that so many other brave souls have shown under like affliction. Louisa Gardner, and the younger brother, Orville, remain in the old home at Stanbridge East.

Amittai Scott, of North Stanbridge, near West Farnham, will be remembered as one of the early students. She and Lucy Buck are cousins. Amittai was a sunny-hearted, pretty girl, and a sweet singer. She married Mr. Thomas Hayes, of Farnham, who died a few years ago. Mrs. Hayes says she was "present" in Mr. Simeon Gilbert's year, and adds, "I seem to see him now, standing on the platform, so dignified and elegant." Dr. Gilbert has stood on many a platform since that time, not only elegant, but eloquent. Mrs. Hayes has one son and some bright little grand-children living in West Farnham, and an adopted daughter, now living in Winnipeg, B.C., with whom, since her husband's death, Mrs. Hayes spends much of her time, as well as with her relatives in Manchester, N.H. She writes entertainingly of her travels, and, like the rest of us, sometimes dreams of "the happy old days at Stanbridge."

From Mrs. Bryan-Richardson we learn of our old friend, Harriet Eager, who married Mr. Levi Scott, of Cowansville, one of the best of men. For some years they resided in the Western States, then for some time in Montreal, finally returning to the Cowansville home.
