MANUFACTURING LIFE OF CITY WAS NEVER BRISKER

London reports to Bradstreet's that the scarcity of steel is now affecting building operations. Steel shipments have gradually fallen off and it is feared that some erections will be greatly handicapped unless steel shipments improve. Credit houses state that there are practically no requests for extensions of time, and that nearly all rural merchants are taking full advantage of discounts. The manufacturing life of the city was possibly never brisker than it is at the present time.

THE BABY IN THE BASKET.

Readers of the daily papers in a cer-Readers of the daily papers in a certain Canadian city of about a year ago may recall the story of a tiny baby that was found in an ash-barrel. At first it was thought that the spark of life had gone out—that there was indeed nothing left but ashes. Yet, impossible as it seems, the baby was actually alive—and is alive today, and as healthy a little one-year-old as could be found in Canada.

Necessarily, the ash-barrel baby was taken to a home, and there she is today, with no one to claim kinship to the bonny blue-eyed babe.

But, though lacking relatives, the one-year-old does not lack friends. The unique staging of her appearance in public affairs attracted the interest and sympathy of a group of girls, who have a club which meets every fortnight.

It appeared that the club met the very night that the story of the little waif was in the papers. One of the girls spoke of it, they all became interested, and, on the impulse of the moment, they decided to make the ash-barrel baby their special care. No, they did not adopt it, but they started a fund for the babe. And now they are putting the money they had accumulated into a Victory Bond for the little person who is so unconscious of its friends.

They are not wealthy girls, but, with twenty of them in the club it is an easy matter to carry a $100 bond, as well The English revenue officers had detected so many stills by the smoke arising from the fires that the man in question, who occupied a house adjoining, connected his flue with the chimney of the barracks of the Royal Irish Constabulary, and his distillery remained undetected until someone betrayed him.

A Clever Advertising Stunt

When men come from Montreal and other cities to see what London is doing to advance the sale of Victory Bonds, then some chap deserves great credit for putting London on the map. The newspaper talk by out-of-town dallies about the Victory Loan trapeze artist is the finest advertising that London has had in many moons, and some mention should be made of the fellow who originated it. We can make room in London for a whole lot of men like him, and we can use a bunch of his advertising ideas. The best feature about this stunt is that it not only advertises London, but it also sells Victory Bonds.
