The Visit That is a Happy Toronto World's

Just run over in your mind the various homes in which you have been a guest, and the chances are there is one which stands out pre-eminently as the place you would rather visit again than any other. It is not because of the lavishness of the entertainment offered there. Perhaps you have known more elaborate meals, more perfectly furnished homes, more diversions than this one offered, but it is because the hostess understood you and the home breathed the air of hospitality, that it is a pleasant memory.

The air of hospitality—what is it? It comes from the power on the part of the hostess to make you feel that you and you alone are the one person whose presence is most desired at the time you are there. You seem to fit right into the scheme of things. You are not conscious that the routine of the home is being in any wise upset by your presence; indeed, you have an idea that perhaps because you are there the hostess is adding to her own happiness.

there the hostess is adding to her own happiness.

The hostess lets you have some time to yourself during your stay. There is not something being planned or done for you every moment in the day. You are a free agent, and are treated as such, you have time to yourself for reading, napping or just resting.

There are no family jars to disturb the peace of your visit, nor, indeed, are there tales of unpleasant happenings in that home or any others. In other words, petty gissip is not ready to be poured into your ears, whether or no, but an atmosphere of peace pervades the conversation as well as the home itself.

There are the little attentions, unobtrusively performed—the flowers in your room, the glass of hot water at hand which, it is recalled, you always enjoy the first thing in the morning, perhaps a favorite dish for luncheon—little things that show you your visit is a happy incident and one to which the hostess has looked forward.

Yes, it is a visit in a home such as this that makes one long to "go again."

Domestic Service Danger-

After one years' experience of insuring employes of male and female servants against their liability under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, which came into operation a year ago, the principal insurance companies are unanimous in their declaration that the compensation which they have had to pay has greatly exceeded their expectations, but that there is no present intention of increasing the premiums, says a London writer.

It has been found that domestic servants are more liable to accidents of one kind or another than was formerly generally supposed, and that a good proportion of these accidents are of a serious nature. Then the number of fatal accidents has proved to be great-

Beauty Patterns

Little , Girl's' Box-Pleated Dress.

No. 8230. Girls' Box-Pleated Dress. Cut in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10, 12 years. Eightyear size will require 3 1-2 yards of 36-inch material. This little box-pleated dress of white pique is cut in one piece from the shoulder to the lower edge, and is both stylish and simple. The closing is made invisibly on the left side under a box-pleat and the neck opens over a removable shield finished by a high standing collar. The sleeves may be full length or short, completed by turned back cuffs.

A pattern of this illustration will be mailed to any address on the receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps.

serious nature. Then the number of fatal accidents has proved to be greater than was anticipated.

"In all, we have received and paid just over 7000 claims," said the assistant manager of one of the largest insurance companies, "and that number forms a considerable proportion of our domestic servant insurances.

"Our number of fatal accidents—17—is also greater than we looked for. In salso greater than we looked for. In season that sum can scarcely be reached, as it means three years' full wages at £2 a week, and very few domestic servants earn that amount. In many cases where the dead servant had others depending on her we have had to pay £150."

Hydro Power Engineer Replies to Scare Letter of J. J. Wright.

R. A. Ross of Montreal, consulting engineer of the hydro-electric commis the Toronto Electric Light Co. published in The Globe. Mr. Wright set up the argument that the transmission erect to convey the electric current from Niagara Falls to the municipalities, will be a serious menace to the chances of accident from overhead electrical transmission in the city are a million to one as compared with the likelihood of danger from high voltage transmission in the country.

"Mr. Wright speaks of our high voltage. Why, his own incandescent wires carry a voltage of 2200 as far as the transformer, and his are wires a voltage of about 5000. I have known men killed with 110 volts. Such a case occurred in Montreal, and I read of another in the old country. Consider the thousands of miles of wires in Toronto; consider how these wires cross and recross. Isn't it a fact that one of Mr. Wright's own wires broke on Bloor-street recently, hung in a tree for two days, and then killed a boy? The hydro-electric line is to be a commercial line, and it's not good business to have breaks, stoppages, etc. Our cable, too, is from half an inch to three-quarters thick. In Toronto, when a wire drops, the electricity is likely to get into a house. Then, by way of emphasis, remember how many people pass under your city wires, as contrasted with the few that will pass under the transmission line."
