Jose Collins Put Herself on Stage

Daughter of Late Lottie Collins Tells of Beginning of Her Career.

"In spite of the theatrical prominence of my mother, I think I am honestly entitled to claim the credit for having put myself on the stage," declared Miss Jose Collins, noted prima donna of "The Merry Countess," which comes to the Alexander Theatre this week.

"I do not know that the honor, if such it is, could be construed as overwhelming, but nevertheless I take all the credit strictly to myself. As a matter of fact, mama didn't want me to go on the stage at all. I was bred in a convent. Oh I know, many actresses make that statement, but in my case, it is more than ordinarily true. When I was only two and a half

Will Go Out Monday

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Jan. 25.—Unless there is a Jewish chorus in the situation in the city, before Monday

two years before her death—that my mother changed her mind about the singing question. One day, when she heard me singing around the house, she said: "I wonder if that girl isn't developing a voice?" She immediately took me off the stage, and put me to studying with Geraldine Uimer. Then I went back to the West End London hall as a singer. I remained in them only a short time, because Mr. Lee Shubert heard me and engaged me for the New York Winter Garden. As soon as I arrived in New York I sought out the best vocal instructor I could find, who was Mr. Louis Howard Croxon, of the Metropolitan Opera House, and worked harder than ever, with the result that when "The Merry Countess" was brought over from London to the Casino I was selected for the prima donna role, and, of course, my rendition of the famous "Czarina" aria proved the wisdom of my selection of a singing teacher, and incidentally quelled my weekly salary.
