NOVA SCOTIA COAL

Visitor Learns with Amazement About the Estimated Quantity.

(Maritime Merchant.)

The man sitting beside us was from Oklahoma, or Kansas (we forget which), and as the train sped through from Yarmouth he asked us an occasional question about the resources of Nova Scotia. "You have some coal in this country?" he said. "Yes," we replied, "we have a little. Hon. E. H. Armstrong, our commissioner of public works and mines, who is sitting on the other side of the aisle, can tell us approximately how much we have." Mr. Armstrong turned his head in the direction of the enquiry and said: "Well, I suppose there is a certain amount of guess-work about it, but some geologists estimate that with our coal extensions into the Gulf of St. Lawrence along the Cape Breton coast, we have about 9,000,000,000 tons; others more moderate say we have 6,000,000,000 tons."

"Six billion five hundred million tons! Think of it!" exclaimed the man from Oklahoma, or Kansas, or wherever he was from. Even the lower estimate seemed to take his breath away. "Six billion five hundred million tons!" he exclaimed again. "About enough to pay off the world's war debt if turned into cash at present day values."

The visitor was very much impressed. And so he should have been. With such enormous coal deposits as these there is nothing in the world that can stop the industrial expansion and increase of wealth of the province of Nova Scotia. It is not only what this coal means to her in direct sales, but what it promises indirectly, that is of significance. It was the old country the trading centre of the world. She sent out coal and exchanged it for the goods of foreign countries. It was coal that gave her the outward cargo for her ships. And so the time is not far distant when the thing that England did, we should be doing. Six billion five hundred million tons of coal will stand a lot of digging, and if labor is only disposed to be half decent with capital, the development of the Nova Scotia coal fields ought to be one of the world's big industrial successes during the next fifty years. Oh, yes, indeed! we have some coal in Nova Scotia. Not very much, only seven or eleven billion tons!

The Only Dessert of This Kind

There are numerous forms of quick gelatin desserts. But Jiffy-Jell is the only one with the real-fruit flavors sealed in glass.

They crush the fruit, condense the juice and seal it. A bottle of the liquid fruit essence comes in each package of Jiffy-Jell. In a moment's time you can prepare a delicious fruit dessert.

Sugar is used in Jiffy-Jell—not saccharine. And real-fruit flavors in place of artificial. It will give you a new conception of these delightful dainties.

Jiffy-Jell is often used in place of jam, marmalade, etc. Additional sugar may be used to suit the taste.

AN INTERESTING WORD PICTURE OF ENGLISH DERBY

Epsom Downs, Eng., June 11—(A. P. Correspondence)—The great English Derby, always a fashion show and a carnival as well as a horse race, this year culminated the records of its hundred and fifty years with an attendance which crowded the race course to standing capacity and populated the hills in a day with a crazy-patterned city of hundreds of thousands of merry-makers, to whom the racing was only an incident in the celebration of the annual festival.

My lord and lady, the barmaid and the coster-monger and all classes of Britons between were there, hobnobbing with pleasure-seekers from other lands—Americans, Frenchmen, Belgians, Italians, Russians, Czech-Slovakians and titled as well as work-worn Orientals and Asiatics. The low green hills and hedged-in fields about the famous course were blackened with a multitude of nearly 1,000,000 persons, thousands of whom slept in the warm sun throughout the day, apparently unconcerned about the "Derby" contest.

The pilgrimage to the downs began the day before the Derby. An unbroken tide of strange couplings, flower-laden Epsom over all roads. Luxurious limousines crawled along the crowded ways in the wake of two-wheeled donkey carts, and the caravans were checked by the picturesque turnouts popular before motor-driven vehicles limited their usefulness—the chaise, the coach-and-four, the Irish jaunting car, the dog cart, and odd home-made wagons and carts. Not infrequently appeared disabled army officers riding through the dust in motor-driven wheel chairs.

Thronged about trooped in across the fields. Children loomed in the grass along the roads, hailing the fine automobiles and their silk-hatted occupants cheerily. Here and there a woman with a baby in her arms begged a penny.

While yet a mile from the course the later arrivals were forced by the congestion to park their vehicles and walk—carrying with them their luncheon baskets, and jugs of ale or whiskey, of which there was a larger and carefully conserved supply.

The picnickers who camped on the course overnight hastily pitched tents, or ramshackle lean-tos, made tea and served luncheons. Many slept in the open, and down in Epsom a train of cars was commandeered to house the more fastidious. After dark bonfires were built, fairs put up, and all the countryside was fantastically illumined.

Even when the king and the queen and attendant nobility appeared there was only a ripple of applause, consisting chiefly of perfunctory "hear, hear!" and a nodding of heads indicating approval. Above this the raucous cries of the tipsters and the horse jargon of the bookkeepers could be heard.

Few persons except those in the stands saw the races and these displayed no excitement, beyond calling out, "they're off" or making premature announcement of winners.

The crowds stood up when the horses entered in the Derby run, but relaxed into lazy attitudes when the winner was known. It was still the middle of the afternoon and few left when the racing was finished. They made it a full holiday, wandering around and over the course, patronizing the vendors of sausages, lemonades and fish, or try-your-weight machines, or the three-card man, until night had fallen.

A recent but unconfirmed report affirms that the island of Tubuai, about 400 miles to the south of Tahiti, is also shaking.

This, it is held, would tend to confirm the theory that the source of the disturbance is a submarine outbreak somewhere to the south and west, in that part of the Pacific where volcanic eruptions would never be seen.

PLAGUE IN THE SOUTH; KILL RATS, IS HIS ADVICE

Surgeon General Cumming Urges Wholesale Extirpation to Avert Serious Epidemic.

Washington, June 29—Calling attention to the discovery of bubonic plague in several American and Mexican gulf ports, and renewing his warning regarding the introduction of plague from Mediterranean ports which are known to be infected, Surgeon-General Hugh S. Cumming has urged communities throughout the country, and especially along the coast, to inaugurate rat-extirpation and rat-proofing campaigns.

"Entirely in accordance with forecasts made by the public health service over a year ago," said Dr. Cumming, "bubonic plague has made its appearance in the United States. At the moment, foci of the infection are known to exist at New Orleans, Pensacola and Galveston and in Tampico and Vera Cruz, Mexico. In Vera Cruz the disease appears to have assumed the proportion of an epidemic against the rat and other rodent pests."

"With the definite knowledge we now possess regarding the transmission of this disease, and especially as to the role played by rats, the situation should cause no alarm or panic among the people of this country. Nevertheless the very real menace of bubonic plague calls for an energetic campaign of extermination directed against the rat and other rodent pests."

"Bubonic plague is primarily a disease of rodents, especially rats," continued General Cumming, "and the disease can be controlled effectively by measures directed against the rat. The extermination of rats is all the more to be desired because of the tremendous economic damage they cause."

According to conservative estimates made by the public health service on the basis of numerous surveys, there is at least one rat for every person in the United States. This estimate coincides with that for Great Britain and Ireland, and with authoritative figures from Denmark, France and Germany. The annual upkeep per rodent was computed by the same authorities as $1.90 in Great Britain, $1.20 in Denmark and $1 in France. The depredations of the rats in the United States will very probably exceed the estimate for Great Britain. One-half a cent a day is considered conservative, but even on this computation it costs the United States $100,000,000 a year to support its rat population. This does not include mice.

"The public health service is prepared to detail trained experts to assist communities in organizing the fight against rats," said General Cumming. "Many of our officers have had extensive practical experience in this work, and now how to make it really effective. In the seaport cities the work of extermination should be supplemented by bacteriological laboratory examinations to determine whether or not plague infection is present among the rodents. In the inland cities this is not necessary."
