She handed him a card upon which was printed G. B. Branson. He said. 'It may be best for me not to call a Physician. Could I not come upor some pretended business of a kind in which he takes an interest?" 'He has houses to rent on Brandy wine street,' she said, after a pause-'to rent and to sell.' 'Very good,' rejoined the doctor,

'that will serve me. Now, Miss Branson, you must not be surprised if 1 cut up some queer antics. He laughed as he said that. 'Watch me closely for a clew to what I would have you do or 'I think I understand,' she simply said. 'Good evening, sir.' The next morning Doctor Paul Vent nor took from a drawer a strong horse shoe magnet. He rubbed steadily upon the blades of his pocket-knife with one of the poles of the magnet, thoroughly electrifying it. He purchased a paper of very line needles at an adjoining store, then set out for the residence of

He found the latter to be a man well advanced in life, intelligent and genial so genial, in fact, that the doctor wondered at there being so much of the suspectful in his nature. The doctor the houses on Brandwine street, in which Mr. Branson earnestly joined, and vividly explained points in the speculation Sir, could I trouble you for a drink of water?' the doctor suddenly asked 'Certainly,' replied the other, 'Kate reminded Miss Branson, with a smile. 'I wronged him,'admitted the doctor.

'But I had to assail some one. Can you explain the matter to him, and procure a situation elsewhere?' 'I will try,' she replied. The doctor bowed and then hurried back to his office. At the end of the week he received a second voluntary fee from his fair friend. He became a frequent visitor at the house of Mr. Branson, and finally married the fair, dark-eyed young girl who had brought him his first case.
