A FROSTY RECEPTION

The Hon. M ssrs Emmerson and McKeown Fail to Arouse Any Enthusiass—A Small Meeting

The liberal rally in the York Theatre last night was slimly attended and entirely devoid of enthusiasm. One of the speakers, E. M. McDonal, the liberal representative from Pictou, N. S., announced for the occasion, did not appear. Those who did speak held out at windy length and sorely tried the patience of their hearers. The primator in the grand demonstration last night were noticeably annoyed at their chilling reception, and if appearances are not delusive a stolled indifference has possessed the rank and file of the liberal party in this city.

About a quarter past eight the Hon. Mr. Emmerson arrived. Fils reception was most enthusiastic and about three pairs of hands clapped vigorously for about 20 seconds. M. B. Edwards was the chosen chairman and he announced to Mr. Vrogm for the valuable address, which was listened to with marked the unavoidable absence of the speaker whom the larger number of those present had turned out to hear. John L. Carleton was called upon to fill the gap.

Mr. Carleton spent about three quarters of an hour in ridiculing the conservative party and their candidate for the bye-election. He referred slightingly to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked the solid to all the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the solid to all the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the solid to all the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the solid to all the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the solid to all the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the solid to all the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the lighting to the work of Mr. Daniel as marked at the lighting to the wo

Mr. Emmerson then made an appeal to the individual to support the liberal candidate. He perilously came to the verge of begging votes for his right hand prop. He said that if Mr. Mc-Keown was not elected it would conanything like a beginning of the end, the audience showed their impatience

The contention of the opposition that Portland, Me., would reap the fruition of the Moncton-Quebec end were conructed, was absurd and idiotic. He sheered at the conservatives for endorsing Mr. Chamberlain's policy and said he personally would never wish success to any scheme backed by the tories.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson then began to speak. He experienced no interruptions at the opening of his speech from an enthusiastic audience. Mr. Emmerson first spoke of the importance of the present election, and pointed out how the defeat of the liberal candidate would lessen his influence at the cabinet council. He attempted to debinet council. He attempted to demonstrate how the liberal rule for the last seven years had advanced the good chance for talking, and an en-

Towards the close of Mr. Emmerson's speech, when the hearers' impatience had become too evident, Mr. McKeown who had been keeping behind the scenes, rushed upon the platform apparently out of breath, in the hope of restoring the lagging interest, but his arrival on the front of the platform only called forth a faint and brief handclapping from a few of the machine.

When Mr. McKeown started to speak the people were filing out in large numbers, and he asked them to bear with very little in the way of organization and are divided into cliques. The Drouin crowd is not by any means re-conciled to taking a back seat, and
