NEW TOWN PARK FOR PEOPLE OF SUSSEX

Mayor Wallace Tells of Other Improvements in Kings County Center.

The people of Sussex are out to improve the town and one of the innovations is a park. A generous citizen gave the free use of an area of several acres beside the river, well shaded by elms, and capable of being converted into an inviting park. The first evening fifty men turned out, and the next evening forty, and the good work went on until the place was cleaned up and a band stand erected. Seats were placed in the park and Mayor Wallace says that it was a pleasant sight at noon on Dominion Day to see groups of visitors to the town eating lunch and resting in the shade. They were quick to recognize the value of the new park. All the work done has been voluntary thus far, and men of all classes heartily joined. The Town Improvement Association, which is an active organization, was to hold a meeting last evening to consider improvements generally. Quite a number of trees were planted last spring along the streets of the town.

Mayor Wallace says that a dozen or more houses are being built this summer. The grounds at the new Agricultural School have been graded, and there are more applications for the coming courses at this school than can be accommodated. The firemen, who are good workers for the town's benefit, have had their quarters improved and have been provided with facilities for outdoor games.

BAPTIST CONVENTION CLOSED AFTER SUCCESSFUL MEETINGS

Interesting Session Held During the Last Three Days
—Greater Energy in Sunday School Work Urged On All the Delegates.

The annual meeting of the Sixth Baptist District closed last evening after a most successful and inspiring series of sessions. The large number of the out of town delegates contributed much to the success of the meetings which were all held in the recently renovated Tabernacle church, Haymarket Square.

There were three sessions yesterday, that of the evening commencing at 7.15 o'clock with a song service and a devotional led by Rev. W. P. Parker, Rev. J. S. Nowlan conducted a round table talk on Sunday school work in which he emphasized a system for greater uniformity in the study of the books of the Bible in the school. The study of the books of the minor prophets were too much neglected. In view of the innovation there must be a new agency for conducting the basis of study, other than interdenominational and non only organization of Sunday school boards but concentration was necessary. These arguments were brought nearer home by the following reasons: First, the condition found today in the schools; second, the great importance of Sunday schools, and third, in line of progress a change in the appointment of a Sunday school board, similar to that in the West and in Ontario and Quebec.

Sunday School Board.
The work of this board was to meet the necessities of the church, to come in contact with the people outside of the schools and to conduct a thorough study of the Bible. Further, the board had undertaken to develop an educational aspect. All students entering Acadia University must take a course in Sunday school methods, while teachers training correspondence courses were carried on through the college.

The board has also recognized the need of establishing an annual institute.

Heroes of Our Own.
"It had also been realized by the board, that by co-operation with the Western, Ontario and Quebec boards, we shall be in a place to build up Canadian Baptist Sunday school literature instead of relying on literature from the boards of the United States," said the speaker. "We have hundreds of heroes of our own who are more worthy to study than Jefferson or Washington. The time must come when we can develop our own literature."

"With this end in view a co-operation rally day programme with the Western, Quebec and Ontario boards is to be carried out and we will join hands in one great service for the glory of Canada and Jesus Christ. This is the first move in this direction," said the speaker. "We have hundreds of heroes of our own who are more worthy to study than Jefferson or Washington. The time must come when we can develop our own literature."

There was a definite contribution that each one could give to the Sunday school. There must be co-operation and with this there would be success.

Dr. McIntyre followed with an address on the Grand Ligne Missions in Quebec. He spoke on the conditions

HOW INHABITANTS OF DINANT LIVE IN RUINS OF THEIR SHATTERED TOWN

A LITTLE TRAFFIC PROCEEDS OVER THE RESTORED BRIDGE AT DINANT
The place illustrated is Dinant, one of the most beautiful of all the Belgian towns dotted along the course of the River Meuse. Readers will recall how drastic was the treatment which it suffered in the early stages of the war. When in full blaze the scene, as witnessed from the opposite heights of the gorge, must have appeared like some gigantic furnace. When fire and explosion had spent themselves it was found that the streets were choked with the ruins of numberless houses. The towering bulbous spire above the church had gone. Now, after many months, summer sunshine has come again to the Meuse Valley. Dinant has been swept, and one can walk through most of the streets which were formerly so well known to tourists. The bridge across the river has been restored to traffic, the nave of the church has been reerected, and the two towers have been temporarily capped, and there is, of course, no reason in German eyes why Dinant should not be perfectly happy, busy and successful. These pictures show the actual condition of the shattered town. A few men, a greater number of women, children and babies, still live among the shattered ruins of their former homes. A walk through the streets recalls alternately memories of Pompeii and Meenias, so complete has been the destruction in certain parts, and yet here and there a building will be little damaged amid the surrounding ruins.

passing of a resolution against the liquor traffic. The resolution in full is as follows:
Whereas, in the war we are now waging the British Empire is fighting for its existence and, therefore, nothing must be left undone that should be done in order to insure victory to our arms;
And whereas, according to the proved declarations of our leading statesmen, that the greatest enemy, that now confronts us, is the liquor traffic, which, in the words of the late Hon. W. E. Gladstone, is more destructive of the nation's interest, than famine, pestilence and war combined,
And whereas our beloved Sovereign, King George V. (God bless him), and his court, and the ministers of state, together with the leading commanders of the army and navy, recognizing the gravity of the situation, have, in the spirit of true patriotism, abjured the use of alcoholic beverages during the period of the war;
And whereas, according to the proved declarations of our leading statesmen, that the greatest enemy, that now confronts us, is the liquor traffic, which, in the words of the late Hon. W. E. Gladstone, is more destructive of the nation's interest, than famine, pestilence and war combined,

(God bless him), and his court, and the ministers of state, together with the leading commanders of the army and navy, recognizing the gravity of the situation, have, in the spirit of true patriotism, abjured the use of alcoholic beverages during the period of the war;
Therefore be it resolved that this district meeting reaffirm its position regarding the liquor traffic with testing emphasis in view of the great and added danger with which it now menaces our Empire, viz., that it should cease to have legal sanction and protection by our municipal and provincial governments.
Further resolved, that again we call upon every member of our churches to do all he or she can to abolish this accursed traffic from our land.
Finally resolved, that our pastors be requested to keep the abolition of the liquor traffic as the national objective before their congregations until it becomes a practical and dominating issue in the government of our country and that we hereby ask the provincial government to accede to the request of the forces that make for the promotion and upbuilding of all that is good and elevating and for the best interests of our province."

MIGHT SECURE AN INJUNCTION

Street Railway Foundations Again Before City Commissioners.

The common council met in committee at noon yesterday. Mayor Frink presided and Commissioners Wigmore and Potts and the common clerk were present.

Charles McDonald was heard in protest against the assessment on the land in King street owned by his wife and occupied by the buildings of T. McAvity & Sons, Limited. He was invited to appear before the common council at the next meeting.

Commissioner Potts presented a copy of a judgment of the Supreme Court of New Brunswick in the street railway matter and it was read by the common clerk.

The question as to who was the authority to decide what would constitute a sufficient foundation under the tracks was raised and the commissioners decided that there was no doubt that this rested with the city engineer.

Commissioner Potts said that the decision would be given its first test in Main street on the new work being undertaken there.

Commissioner Wigmore—"Suppose the company refuses to lay a foundation such as you want, what will you do?"

Commissioner Potts—"I might do one of several things. I might lay the foundation myself and then secure an injunction to prevent the company running over that section until they have paid for the work."

The committee adjourned.

The House Fly Danger

The Canadian Department of Agriculture have recently circulated a poster entitled "How to Deal With the House Fly Danger," especially published by the direction of the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, containing some excellent information and ideas about how to overcome this great pest.

House flies are now recognized as the most serious carriers of the germs of certain diseases such as typhoid fever, tuberculosis, etc. A single fly may carry as many as 500 million germs upon or inside its body. The best method of fighting the danger is to prevent the breeding.

House flies breed in decaying matter and all kinds of refuse. The easiest way to get over the difficulty is to burn or bury all such refuse within a few days but at once if possible. If it cannot be disposed of at once, it should be sprinkled with borax or chloride of lime, and it is most important that stable refuse should be regularly removed within six days.

Windows and doors should be properly screened. All milk and fruit should be kept covered. Everything in the way of food which has any attraction whatever for the fly should be kept under cover. The presence of flies indicate the presence of filth in the neighborhood or unsanitary conditions.

THE CUSTOMS HOUSE.

The work of wiring the customs house for electric lights is proceeding steadily, but slowly, on account of the difficulty experienced in boring through the solid walls and ceilings for the wire ducts. Unconcealed wiring had been installed in some portions of the building, but most of it was dependent upon gas for illumination.
