AS A WOMAN THINKETH

By HELEN ROWLAND ght, 1920, by The Wheeler Syndics

There are just three kinds of marriages.

A few are deally happy.

A few are desperately un happy.

But most marriages are merely "uncomfortable!"
That is the theory of Mr. W. L. George.
And ien't he right—oh, ISN'T he right!
Ask any average wite—or husb and.
We know, we know, WE know!
Love does not die, half so often, from a violent stab as from a thousand little pin-pricks—
Nor from a great disillusionment as from a million little discomforts!

Nor, from a great dislikusionment as from a million little discomforts! Of course, every woman prays to be "fically happy."

But she can endure being trayically and passionately miserable. (There is, at least, some consolation in feeling sorry for herselt.) It's being drably, dully, stupidly, eternally UNCOMFORTABLE, this of deadly!

Nor to have exactly what you want when you WANT it! Never to be able to retire when you like, get up when you want to, when you're hungry, mope when you're sad, or laugh when you're Always and forever to be subject to some other human-being's won't moods tenses tastes, and prejudices!

Nor to serve a meal without a shrdder at the thought that some-thing may be forgotten, or overcook ed. or overlooked.

Nor to have a cosy, chummy, in teresting conversation, But always to have to keep up a running monologue, to an accom-diment of grunts and monosyllables— THAT'S what an "uncomfortable marriage" means to a woman!

And, to a man, it means— Never to be able to spend a perfectly quiet evening, without being chattered at, or "hovered" over. Never to be able to come down to breakfast without the painful sboding that you are going to be asked for "more money" or conted with a bill.

Never to be able to glance at a pretty woman, without being accused "mental infidelity."

Never to be able to enjoy a nice, quiet grouch, or a good round swear, or a smelly old pipe.

Or to go without a shave, or put your feet on the divan and your ashes on the rugs, without a debate or a scrap.

Never to be able to overeat, or to sneeze, or to go out in the rain Without being followed around with admonitions and a hot water

Never to be able to stay down town or at the golf club for dinner without calling up and "reporting"—like a policeman!

Oh Lord, what a penal servitude we make of marriage. When we COULD so easily make it a heavenly refuge of mutual

Just by letting each other ALON E!

By minding our own business!

By having as much regard for one another's personal liberty,
As we have for one another's tociabrush and one another's napkin.

THAT'S what makes marriage a prison—instead of a privilege,
A wrestling-match—instead of a rest-cure,
An autocracy—instead of a democracy,
A purgatory—instead of a Paradise!"

Yea, verily, if I could write the Ten Commandments of Matrimony,
The first NINE would be,
"Mind your own business!"

And the tenth would be—"Partnership—not ownership!"

Mrs. Lawrence, of the Cottage Hospitz's Committee, stated that in a letter received from St. George, Mrs.
Kent wrote that St. George would like a district nurse and would assist in every way with her support, but that after consultation with leading citi zens it had been decided that the time is not yet ripe for the establishment of a cottage hospital in that town.

Relief Committee It was stated that a committee meet-ing for the campaign for the Reilef for Stricken Europe had been held yes-terday morning, F. A. Dykeman, con-vener, and an appeal will be made November 232. A circular letter has vener, and an appeal will be made November 2372. A circular letter has been sent all branches, pointing out that disease is prevaient, doctors and nurses few, millions of women and children are starving and needing help. On motion it was decided to open the office on Prince William street until May, increasing the renumeration paid the secretary, who will give so many hours a day when she will be at the office to give information or assist members. Miss Jarvis' work was highly commended by several members of the executive.

Mrs. Kühring, convener of the Progress and Activities Committee reported on the success of the Exhibition of the Start and set hundred persons visited the booth and much help was given by out-of-town of a language of the proprises. A letter was read from Judge Portses
