The Ecstasies of Dreamland.
(By a Banker.)

Amongst the strangest of all the phenomena of life those "baseless fabrics of a vision"—dreams—may surely be included. In dreams everything is exaggerated, and the "old Adam" asserts itself far more aggressively than in waking hours. Especially is this the case after a late meal of indigestible food when, in some, a dream of free horror comes, and in others a violently pugilistic spirit is developed, the dreamer in thundering, stentorian tones shouting defiance at his assailant. This is an especially inconvenient form of nightmare from which to suffer when staying for instance at an hotel with but lath and plaster walls between the rooms.

But probably most people's dreams are of a pleasant character, and with the exception of a dream-vision of the glory-land with which some have been privileged—the most delightful of all these ethereal reveries is the thrilling pleasure of coasting off the trunnions of earth, and ranging as will over the air, on the water, or over hill and dale.

While in some part of the fair earth where all is beautiful, lovely flowers bedecked paths, rising aqueducts created with tall palms with graceful fronds waving in the delicious breeze; scattered monarchs of the forest from which depend gorgeous orchids, amongst which fit many-hued humming birds; while the broad ocean, a vision of azure and glittering diamonds stretches out to the horizon. Exploring the beauties of the scene we find that we need but lightly touch the ground with the foot, and at each step we spring through the air many yards, waiting over our heads, and in the exuberance of our delight bounding and curvetting about, now in the air, now on the land. Or perhaps we glide down the cliff's edge as a meteor, sliding along without exertion as though it were all ice, and descending in a twinkling on the steep hillside.

And now arrived at the cliff's edge we take a delicious flight down to the waves breaking on the shore beneath; now skimming over the foam bedecked crests, or making extraordinary invasions beneath their smiling hollows, retreating an upward flight, and, from a towering height, making a swoop downwards; then joyously gliding over the heavier surface, down

CAPE BRETON LAD DROWNED IN A RESERVOIR.

Louisburg Likely to Be the Shipping Port of Cape Breton Coal and Iron Company.

Steamer Minto Has Been Secured by Sydney Yachtmen to Witness International Yacht Race at New York—No Carnival Will Be Held This Year at Sydney.

Sydney, N. S., July 19.—(Special.)—A 13-year-old boy named McMillan, of Reserve Mines, was drowned yesterday afternoon in the reservoir between Dominion No. 3 and Reserve. The boy with a few companions was fishing at the place. In some manner, McMillan, who was sitting on the edge of the reservoir, slipped into the water, which at this place was twenty feet deep.

The Cape Breton Coal, Iron & Railway Co. has bought a number of properties at Louisburg for the purpose of securing a suitable location for a shipping pier. Mr. Lancaster manager of the company is enthusiastic in favor of Louisburg as a shipping port. The town council of Louisburg has called a public meeting for the purpose of ascertaining whether the citizens will approve of granting the company concessions in the event of their selecting Louisburg for their shipping port.

During the present season over 100,000 pounds of salmon come to North Sydney for Port aux Basques. This is more than double the amount sent up last year.

Newfoundlanders working at Sydney Mines are leaving for home by the coast on account of the smallpox scare. Over fifty left by the last trip of the Reine.

The members of the Royal Cape Breton Yacht Club, who were trying to secure a steamer to take a special party to see the great international yacht races, have secured the government steamer, Minto. She will accommodate between seventy and eighty people. The trip will last fourteen days.

The proposal of holding a carnival in Sydney with a regatta on the harbor has been abandoned on account of the lateness of the season. It was feared that it could not be made a success in the short time at the disposal of the promoters.

Maritime Boys' Camp.

West Quaco, July 17.—Y. M. C. A. Camp, Section 1, of the Maritime Boys' Camp, landed here this morning at 6 o'clock.

The Beaver, which brought the party, arrived a little after dark last night and remained at anchor till this morning. The voyage was rather rough and most of the boys were seasick.

Today, when they were asked about it, they simply say, "Oh, forget it!" or "I like it with the camp site." In fact, a more beautiful or better arranged place could hardly be found anywhere. We hope the work of pitching the tents will be finished tonight and everything points to a great time.

THE GOVERNMENT'S RAILWAY PLANS.

Premier Laurier Says the Resolutions Will Come Up Next Week.

DISCUSSION LATER.

Hon. Mr. Sifton Explains Why Mr. Bell Has Not Been Permanently Appointed -- $25,000 Voted to Entertain Geological Congress in Ottawa.

Ottawa, July 17.—(Special.)—The leader of the opposition in the house today asked when they might expect the railway policy of the government brought down. He said that parliament was now entering the fifth month and therefore it was time it was informed on this important matter.

The premier said that certain railway resolutions would be brought down next week and the discussion would proceed on the week following.

On the estimates for the geological department, $38,226, there was a discussion. Mr. Monk wanted to know why Dr. Bell was not appointed permanent director of the geological survey.

Hon. Mr. Sifton replied that all he cared to say was that up to the present he had not felt like recommending a permanent appointment. He anticipated being able to make some re-organization of the department so as to facilitate the work in the way of separating the economic duties of the department from the topographical, and thinks that perhaps the question of Dr. Bell's appointment can be settled if those changes are carried out.

Mr. Sifton would not say that Dr. Bell's qualifications were not sufficient. Scientific knowledge, management of the survey, and various qualifications were necessary. While he had no doubt of the great value of the work done by the survey, Mr. Sifton said attention was not being paid to making the economic results available to the public. Information collected at vast expense was not in a form to be available of by the ordinary business man or prospector. Primarily what he wanted was to get all the information down in the library of the survey put into a succinct and popular form, and the first duty of the branch would be to give that policy effect. Already a start has been made in the preparation of a report on nickel.

The dominion government has put $25,000 in the supplementary estimates to entertain the members of the International Congress of Geology which will meet in Ottawa in 1904.

Henry Titus, Formerly of St. John.

The sad news was received Monday of the death of Henry Titus, formerly of this city, who had been living in Newton (Mass.), for the past twelve or fifteen years. Mr. Titus at one time carried on with his father, Richard Titus, a large shipbuilding business a mile or two above Roxbury, and the firm built a great many of the wooden vessels owned in St. John in years gone by. Mr. Titus married Miss Isabelle Estabrook, a sister of George Estabrook, and Mrs. T. H. Hall, of this city. Mrs. George B. Fairweather, of this city, is a sister, and Fred R. Titus an only brother of the deceased. After going to Massachusetts, Mr. Titus became connected with the warehousing business. About three months ago his health began to fail and his death resulted from a complication of diseases. The deceased leaves no family. The body will be interred at Newton.

BOOTH-TUCKER'S AMITY COLONY.

Remarkable Success of a Salvation Army Enterprise in Colorado.

FOUR YEARS OLD.

May Have Solved Problem of Old Age Pensions Through a Scheme of Land Industrial Insurance—Twenty Men Made the Experiment and Results Are Amazing.

If the reported success of the chief farm colony operated under the direction of the Salvation Army may fully be believed, says the Boston Transcript, Commander Booth-Tucker is certainly justified in hoping that a system of old-age pensions can be worked out through a scheme of land industrial insurance. According to a report published in the New York Sun, the accuracy of which is vouched for by Commander Booth-Tucker, the achievements of the army farm colony at Fort Amity (Colorado), border upon the incredible. It was started about four years ago by a score of men who were transported thither from various large cities by the Salvation Army, and had no property except some household furniture. Each man was allowed a plot of land—from ten to twenty acres—a house, a cow or two, one or two horses, pigs and poultry. The expenses of transportation, land, buildings, stock and implements was placed as a debt owed by each man to the Salvation Army. The idea behind this work has been explained in the following words: "Ambassador Joe. H. Choate once said that he started in life with no capital but a letter of introduction from his Uncle Rufus. Now, it is the duty of society to play the part of Mr. Choate's Uncle Rufus to the average man. There is none so helpless as the poor man with a little money in his pocket. Every one is trying to get it away from him. If he is sick and destitute, charity will step in and take care of him. But if he is on his feet everybody is trying to push him down. The man who begs for money is treated better than the man who asks for work." This theory that the Salvation Army could play the part of Mr. Choate's Uncle Rufus is said to have been "thoroughly vindicated" by the Amity colony. The men have been eager to meet their obligations. At times the Salvation Army has had $2,000 in excess payments on hand. In three years the first colonist paid up his whole debt and owned twenty acres, besides building his house and supporting his family in the meantime. In four years, these nineteen or twenty men have reached a position which has enabled them to pay $30,000 in freight last year. The army has given no money; it has paid wages and accepted produce. It has supplied capital the "organizing and administrative ability which we cannot expect from the ordinary individual." Land sold to the colonists at Amity for $1,000 is now supposed to be worth $200,000. Similar results are reported from two other colonies established by the Salvation Army in the west.

This sounds almost too wonderful to be taken literally. Four years is so short a time, and, with due respect for the integrity of promoters of these colonies, one should like to have a cold-blooded report from some competent outsider. Perhaps Professor Ely will include the Colorado colony in the investigations he is making. But evidently Commander Booth-Tucker is so convinced of the success of his scheme that he is ready to apply to it old-age pensions. He says: "A small sum a week could be paid in by a policy holder, the sum would entitle him to an allotment of productive land in any of the army's colonies. This land would be tilled by a resident of the colony on a sharing basis, the policy holder's share to go toward paying for the land. At the end of ten years this would be paid for. Money could then be borrowed with which the owner of the land, could build a house." The practicability of this plan does not quite appeal to one; yet the integrity of the Salvation Army may arrive at something similar through further experiment. Yet let us have the courage of their convictions, and if with such slender means they can make colonies flourish in the wilderness in the space of four years, we can perhaps do no better than to turn over to them some of the problems of the city.

THE DANGER OF CHILDHOOD.

Summer is the most deadly season of the year for little ones. The little life hangs by a mere thread. Cholera, infant cholera and other life-threatening ailments come quickly, and sometimes, in a few hours, extinguish a bright little life. Every mother should be in a position to guard against, or cure these troubles, and there is no need for a medical science will act so surely, especially in so safely as Baby's Own Tablets. A box of the Tablets should be kept in every home where there are little ones, and giving an occasional Tablet to a child who seems to be getting a little off his balance will be kept well and happy. Don't wait until the trouble comes—the may be too late. Remember that these ailments can be prevented by keeping the stomach and bowels right. Mrs. A. Van derwerf, Port Colborne, Ont., says: "My baby was cross, restless and diarrhoea. I gave her Baby's Own Tablets, and they helped her almost at once. I think the Tablets are a splendid medicine for children." The Tablets can guarantee to cure all the minor ailments of little ones; they contain no opiate, no poisonous drug, and can be given safely to a new born babe. Sold by medicine dealers, or mailed at 25 cents a box by writing to the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A surgeon has recently suggested that appendicitis is caused by the habit of crossing the legs, which restricts the action of the digestive apparatus. The appendix is only loosely attached to the caecum, and there is always some half-digested food in the cecal bag. By crossing the legs there is liability that the undigested food may pass into the appendix and set up an inflammation. In a few hours pathological processes set in, and an attack of appendicitis is developed.
