OUR BOSTON LETTER. The Great Jubilee.—American Sentiment on "Indirect Damages.—Major Jones and Open Bars.—The Weather—not the Crops.

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

DEAR TRIBUNE,-Preparations for the International Peace Jubilee go steadily forward. Mere figures cannot convey an idea of the giant nature of this enterprise but as Californians get an approximate horse through their knot-holes, so we may infer the cost of the projected "Coliseum' from the contractor's figures for building the bridges to it over Huntington avenue and Newton street, viz. one hundred thousand (100,000) dollars. Messrs. J. H. Wilcox & Son have the contract for buildorgan by electricity. Of the myriad being accepted in this vicinity that the gratitude is by the outward and visible bellowing cannon, and deafening chorus. ordnance works have not suspended labor, and Moltke's sword is not reconstructed into a pruning-book. Nor is it likely that

THE ALABAMA CONTROVERSY remain unsettled. Not that there is a way party here, or that any one, save a few on-combatants, desires to put on his war paint against England. The American feeling is one of curious indifference, based, no doubt, on the assumption that England for her own protection must stop privateering. Deprived of a merchant marine, the patient Yankee stolidly contemplates the future with the philosophical sentiment, "Thank Heaven, I have nothing to lose by a war, but Heaven help the rich!" claims, and the talk of American arrogance and American assumption is simply nonsense. That they have put in their strongest plea is but an evidence of legal tac quite excusable, if not even laudable. The complaint against Great Britain for her "want of sympathy" is, however, a tritle member from Colchester had spoken earn-estly and warmly on this subject, and in a manner which did credit to his head and more sentimental than a claim for damages his heart. The illness which overtook the Heir apparent to the Throne under Divine of promise? case usually does. Doubtof promise" case, usually does. Doubt-Providence hadled to a great deal of good.

Previous to that illness there was a feeling in England not very friendly towards British Institutions. A large Republican party was evidently gaining ground there.
