substitutes Govt Genl. for the Queen. (see 1866) Blake & Jno. Macdonald held the correct view (see correspondence in sessional papers of 1870 & 1874-1875) There is nothing in the BNA. to justify Her Majesty on advice of her Ministers to disallow provincial acts. What is the policy of disallowance? This is not an arbitrary power. This power exists to be used for certain constitutional purposes. The Crown of the Empire is an unformulated unsystematized federal organization. The Imp. Govt has power to disallow certain acts, how does it exercise this. It reserves to itself the right to legislate on certain domestic affairs. It deals with all questions of foreign affairs & rights and duties of Empire re foreign countries and if and policy encroached on this power the Imp Govt would disallow the act. When the Imp Govt confers right of self Govt on a colony it as a matter of fact abstains from interfering with local affairs, not because it can't
