is 'A June Idyll,' in nineteen cantos, and a delicate bit of imagery it is, replete with true poetic intuition. Then follow many shorter poems, and it is probable that the shorter poems will become more generally popular. The last section of the book is devoted to 'Sleepy Time Songs,' a delightful collection of children's songs. Rudyard Kipling says that 'Only a woman thoroughly understands children,' and Mrs. Jackson has certainly gained admittance into that fairyland so seldom penetrated by grown-ups. Tecumseh

A Drama, and Canadian Poems

By CHARLES MAIR

"The dramatic conception itself is enough to give the work a permanent place in our native literature; but the exquisite poetry in which the larger portion of the lines are set will win for it a wider sphere of usefulness and commendation."—Ottawa Free Press.

"The action of the play is marked by dignity and effectiveness. . . . Mr. Mair is at home with Nature in all her varying moods. His graphic descriptions of woodland scenery are exquisite in their chasteness and beauty. The whole drama abounds in passages of sustained beauty and strength."—Toronto World.

"The characters of Brock, Tecumseh and the Prophet are carefully portrayed. . . . The language is elegant and expressive, the style lucid, and many passages display the genius of a poet and the fervor of a patriot."—Halifax Herald.

With an autograph portrait of Mr. Mair and excellent portraits of Tecumseh and Sir Isaac Brock.

Poems of the New Century

By ROBERT S. JENKINS, M.A.

Professor of Modern Languages,
Trinity University, Toronto.

A VOLUME of verse of quite exceptional quality. Professor Jenkins has felt the force of the tendency in literature to-day to turn from the contemplation of nature to the study of humanity, and this is strongly reflected in his work.
