Story-Writing

THE GREAT LITERARY PROFESSION

"If you write anything remarkable, the magazines will find you out, as the schoolboys find out where the ripe apples and pears are. Produce anything really good and properly constructed and an intelligent editor will jump at it."

—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

"I don't know of any business or profession in which fairer or more generous treatment is accorded than by editors. If one's work is good, the returns will in almost every instance surpass his expectations."—Norman Duncan.

Surely the above authoritative evidence is sufficient to convince you of the great scope this field offers for recognition and ample reward. $100 is about the minimum price offered for a real good story.

We teach story-writing. Ours is the only course offered in Canada. You can learn it in a few months of your spare time. It is conducted by one of Canada's most noted writers. Our little booklet is brimful of interesting facts and information. Send for it to-day.
