GREAT ADVANCE IN FEW YEARS

Only Country in World Owning Legally Registered Trade Mark.

The close of the fifth All-Ireland Industrial Conference marks a definite move forward. The first of these conferences was held in Cork in November, 1905, and had for its immediate result the institution of the Irish National Track Mark. In subsequent years the cities of Dublin, Limerick and Galway invited delegates from all parts of Ireland to hold their representative gathering within their walls. When, at the end of the Galway Conference, we were invited by the Belfast delegates to meet in that city in 1909, it was felt by all that the adhesion of the great industrial in 1909, it was feit by all than the adhesion of the great industrial city of the North set a crown on the efforts which were being made to promote the permanent revival of Irish industries. North, South, East and West are thus shown to in securing increased pass defined in securing increased production and consumption in the home market, with the natural result of an increasing determination to find an outlet abroad for those wares in which Ireland excels.

Without going elaborately into statistics of Irish trade, it will not be out of place if I cite here the official figures for the past few years, published by the Irish Department of Aericulture:

Imports. Exports. £54,140,075 £51,037,545 55,480,926 52,569,548 57,611,944 57,233,698 61,617,225 60,521,245 industrial revival, though it has been brought to prominent no-tice by these annual conferences, these annual conferences, owe its origin to them. At does not over the originate that Act various periods during the past thirty years spasmodic efforst have been made to inculcate the doctrine of the duty of the individual Irishman to support home manufacture; but the success and the permanency to the birth of the Gaelic

TRADE MARK REGISTERED.

In the political sphere there has In the political sphere there has continuously been evident the feeling, translated into action, which has won reform after reform, and maintains an unbroken rank of eighty members in the Irish Party; insistent on winning legislative independence. In this other sphere of Irish life, other forces have operating Irish life, other forces have operatd. Ever since the day, now some sixteen years ago, when a small group of men started the movement for the restoration of our national language to its proper place in the national life, there has been operating on the national life, there has been operating on the national conscience a national life, there has been operating on the national conscience a two-fold prick: "Am I, an Irishman, content to see that distinctive mark of a nation, its language, lost for ever, and, am I doing my duty my country if I do not give a real preference to Irish manufacture?" The national consciousness being thus affected the natural law being thus affected, the natural law of supply and demand operates to of supply and demand operates to bring about the increased production of Irish goods. With the spread of technical instruction one should in-clude also that of the co-operative movement as important factors in the industrial revival. In the dis-tribution as well as in the increased production as well as in the increased production of agricultural wealth co-operation has proved most helpful; but perhaps the most efficient factor has been the registration of the Irish National Trade Mark Outside Ireland there are many who are as yet unaware of its existence. are as yet unaware of its existence.
Still more—to whom it is becoming tamiliar now that art digast 430
Irish firms are using it.—have not grasped the fact that Ireland is the only country—in the world which owns a legally registered Trade Mark applicable to all its products.

Registered on Describer 24th 1006.

owns a legally registered Trade Mark applicable to all its products. Registered on December 8th, 1906, under the provisions of the Trade Mark Act of 1905. The National Trade Mark gives an absolute guanantee that the article to which it is affixed is of Irish origin. The Irish Industrial Development Association, which controls its use, is now recognized as the leading industrial association in the country. It issues licemees only under the most stringent conditions, and under regulations approved by the Board of Trade. In addition, it has instituted a number of successful prosecutions against British and other firms for endeavoring to pass off spurious articles as genuine Irish In this way a stop has been put to French-made crochet being palmed off as Irish lace, and it is no long-greasy for Yorkshire shoody to masquerade as Donegal homespun. But reasy for Yorkshire shoddy to mas-querade as Donegal homespun. But the activities of this Association have not been limited to Police Court prosecutions. Its influence has been exerted in still more far-reaching directions.

PREFERENCE TO IRISH GOODS.

A British firm endeavored to register as a trade mark the Irish word Slaintè. After protracted legal proceedings this was refused by the authorities on the grounds as advanced by the Irish Association, that the use of the Irish language would suggest an Irish origin and would be likely to mislead purchasers. In another case the Association secured the rejection of the registration of a shannock as a trade mark by a tirm whose head-quarters were in England. Thus there has been obtained the valuable recognition by the Courts of Law that the national language and the national emblems are to be used only by genuine Irish firms. Public bodies throughout Irehand are now demanding that the Irish Trade Mark shall be branded on the goods supplied by public contract as a proof of their genuine Irish origin, and now that their right to give a reasonable preference to Irish goods has been legally recognized, the use of the National Trade Mark will in a few years become universal.

Whilst the main efforts explained of the National Trade Mark will in a few years become universal.

Whilst the main efforts are being directed to secure the home market, the steady existence of foreign trade has been a marked feature of Ireland's commercial progress, especially during the last few years. Indeed, it is a remarkable proof of the natural conscities of the century ly during the last few years. Indeed, it is a remarkable proof of the natural capacities of the country, that hampered by the restrictions imposed beyond her taxable capacity, Ireland has been steahfily increasing her export of agricultural produce and of manufactured goods.
A few years ago, I secured through Parliamentary action that some of the most important foreign states should distinguish, in their trade statistics, between Irish and Faglish trade. The United States Government. I am glad to say, is amongst that number and agreed to make the distinction at the earliest possible moment. In future, therefore, instead of finding Ireland's ent. In future, there of finding Ireland's fore, instead trade figures lost under the general designation of "United Kingdom," it will be possible for economists to trace Ircland's commercial dealings with foreign countries from year to year.

IRISH TRADE ACTIVELY PUSH-

Practical steps have been taken to push Irish trade abroad by means of retail stores. Buenos Aires now has a regular Irish Store and Agency under the capable crection of Mr. Bowen, and a valuable connection for Irish laces, tweeds and other products has been established with Irish residents in the Argentine Republic. In London, central premises in the West End have been secured by the new Irish Direct Supply, which makes a representative display at 94 Victoria street, S.W., of Irish goods, drawn from all parts of the island. This store, indeed, is an example of private enterprise carrying out what, in the case of the British out what, in the case of the British out what, in the case of the British Colories, is done at Government expense. Every important British Colony has now in London a well-arranged display of what the Colony produces, and is able to secure subjustantial trade in consequence. Ireland, hardisamonthy than the control of the British Colories and the British Colories and the British Colories and the Colories and the British Colories an stantial trade in consequence. Ireland, handicapped by not having control of her own finances, is urable to spend her money in a similar way. With the progress which has already been made by private enterprise ir, developing an export trade and in opening Irish stores in large centres of population, I confidently anticipate that before long the Irish Store will become a feature in every community where Irish people are to be found, in Australia as well as in North and South America. as in North and South America. RIGHT NOTE STRUCK.

To conclude this rough To conclude this rough summary of Ireland's commercial progress, I am not without hope that the new-ly-established National University of Ireland will play an important part in the country's industrial future, the University Commissioners, of whom I am one charged with the whom I am one, charged with the whom I am one, charged with the duty of framing the statutes, recognised from the first the urgency of providing for an adequate faculty of National Economics, in addition to Political Economy. Without doubt, the focussing of the nation's mind on National Economics as distinct from the general study of economics. from the general study of economics, marks a development far in advance of the older Universities of the University thereby strikes a note which is bound to influence the whole current of thought in the country. Trade of thought in the country of thought in the country. Trade, and above all, honest trade, should be held in high estimation if a country is to succeed. For years, whilst Ireland was grappling with the land problem, now happily nearing solution, observers noted with pain that success in the learned professors and in securing posts in the Farglish Civ. success in the learned professors and in securing posts in the English Civil Service was the goal to which Irish education in every grade was directed. In the new and freer conditions created by the establishment of a National University, and in the formation of a peasant proprietary in place of the old vicious system of land tenure, fresh vital forces have come into play. Increased production and increased consumption of home manufacture, the building up of an export trade—these are the of an export trade—these are the goals to which, inspired by unfaltering determination to secure legislative freedom, the best thought in Ireland is sesolutely directed.—John P. Boland, M.P., in America.

-May Riley Smith.

Your home and mine, Dear Heart ! A long, low window looking the west, O'er softly sloping fields to mist-crowned hills that start From out the peaceful scene like guardians of the blest.

A long, low window looking to the west, A cushioned window seat wherein to rest eventide, and watch the night come down—a welcome guest. Your home and mine, Dear Heart!

A garden fashtoned old and running wild with roses blooming

Eden far removed from city mart A scented nook wherein the rosary of love is said;

A garden filled with roses blooming

The summer sky soft blue up overhead.

And in the whole world only and I—when all is said.
