ANOTHER FIRE IN LISTOWEL.

Stables Burned—A Clear Case of the old-fashioned fire. The fire broke out at about 10 o'clock on Friday night last, and was extinguished at about 11 o'clock. The fire was caused by a fire in the stable of the late Mr. J. H. Brook, and was extinguished by the fire brigade.

STEWART'S SECOND STATEMENT.

On Monday morning Stewart, probably after having caused the conclusion that his chance might be bettered by making a "clean breast" of the business, made the following statement to the coroner, which is subsequently reported in the presence of the jury. This statement is generally believed to be substantially correct.

about any other fires that have taken place. Night before last Stewart said we would have the engine out on Elm street, and that he would be the driver of the old McLean house on fire. I have no ill feeling against anyone.

Frederick Brooks sworn, testified: Am Stewart sitting room at McLean's hotel Friday night about eight o'clock; went to the Grand Central after leaving McLean's; had a drink together with Draper's corner, and Salisbury went to the corner of Elm and Mill streets; I was in conversation with Stewart and Salisbury near the corner; they talked about a fire in the stable; Salisbury suggested that we should go to the stable; Stewart said there was no use setting on fire as it would not burn; the look-up was then suggested. Our object was to have a little fun; a few of the firemen were home and they wanted to show the town what they could do. Think I talked about a fire in the stable; my name of the look because I knew the reflection that a fire in the stable would be as well as most of our able bodied citizens were out of town. The fire was found to be in the stable of the late Mr. J. H. Brook, and was extinguished by the fire brigade.

go home and get some coal oil from his house. We then walked out to the bridge on Elm street. We came back from three o'clock. They asked me when we got back to the corner, if there was a fire, could they get the steam engine out. I said "Yes, certainly, if there was a fire." At this time I was drunk. I then invited them up to the Grand Central to get a drink. I won't be positive whether we had one or two drinks in the Central. From there we went to Draper's corner, and Salisbury spoke about the coal oil again. I said there was no use in going to the stable where to get it nearer. I told them they could get it at Zilliax's, in the back room. Then we had a drink in the bar at Zilliax's. We then walked out to the front. We had an argument about who should get the coal oil. I did so. I went through the bar into the hall, carried the can to McLean's shop. I then went around on Wallace street. I met Brooks by Jas. Green's blacksmith shop. I told him that the oil was not for the stable, but for the corner of Elm and Mill streets. He then asked who else he liked. He then asked whose building that was standing back of the shop. He then asked who else he liked. He then asked whose building that was standing back of the shop. He then asked who else he liked.
