Thus taken, the disease is undoubtedly curable in the great/ majority of cases. ADVANTAGE OF PROMPT ACTION.

The thing to do, therefore, is not to wait until emaciation, night sweats and high fever have set in, but to go as soon as a reasonable suspicion exists (aroused, perhaps, by a persistent cough) that the malady has begun its work to a physician competent to examine and discover from antexaminaution of the sputum, and in other ways whether the suspicion is founded in fact. Too much stress cannot be laid apon securing this early recognition of the disease which may appear

Delay of a few weeks or even a few days in some cases may mean all the difference between early and complete recovery or a long hopeless fight against the enemy. Be wise in time. And of the three factors mention ed, the most important is the open, fresh arr. In former days the con-sumptive patient was kept donfined in a room carefully protected from The reasons of this are simple and obylong even to a layman, but they cannot be reviewed here. High feedings with wholesome and intritious food, such as milk and eggs is, perhaps, the second factor of importance. The the third place, it is highly important that the strength and vitality stored up by good food and an outdoor life should not be dissipated by worry, work or too much exercise for the sake of exercise. The patient needs all the vitality he can summon to his aid to overcome the inraods of the disease: he should be as careful as possible not to expend it needlessly in other directions. other directions.

The great advantage of these curative agencies of which we have spoken is that they are simple, cheap and easily accessible to most people. There is no mystery about them, and they are not patented. To apply them and receive their behefits, it is necessary only for the sufference. is necessary only for the sufferer to act with promptness, persistence, a resolute will and according to a systematic plan. Where these elements are lacking in the treatment, the most expert physician can do but little; the patient must necessarily act largely for himself if he would be cured. As a leading authority on this disease once remarked to us, "Unless a patient has brains and uses them, there is little hope for him. Force of character and strength of will, conjoined with the exercise of common sense are essential factors in every case." The treatment should be followed, of course, under the guidance of a physician, and prefer-ably of one who has made a specialty

Such prejudices are utterly unfound-

Such prejudices are utterly unfound-ed, nothing could be further from the truth. Sanatoriums for the treatment of tuberculosis are not unlike high-class country hotels in many respects, with the difference that they are run under the direction of medical experts with all the facili-ties, and appliances essential for the treatment of disease. Beyond the observance of certain rules and regulations, obviously essential to the ends in view, life in these institutions is quite as free and open as it would be at homje. Strange how often Nature provides an appropriate remedy for a local or general disease. The inside bark of the willow trees, which grow in damp and rheumatic places, gives Salacine, the great cure for actual extension. Quinine, which is the cure for Ague, is made from Peruvian Bark, which tree thrives in swampy, aguish districts, adjain, fruit figurishes in hot climates where liver, kidney and skin diseases abound—and he who lives in a hot climate and abstains from eating fruit will die—generally, from liver disease. Why? Because fruit acts on the liver and causes more bile to flow, which is the natural purgative acts on the kidneys, and makes them move, acts on the kidneys, and makes them excrete more urine, acts on the skin, and increases the kidneys, and makes them excrets morurine, acts on the skin and increases the action of the skin in throwing off impurities. Fruit purifies the blood by increasing the action of the bowels, skin and kidneys. One has to eat a lot of fruit to get the full benefit. A physician in Ottawa, has discovered a method of combining the juices of apples, oranges, prunes and figs and then forcing an additional atom of bitter from the orange peels into the united juices—and this makes a stronger fruit material—many times stronger than ordinary fruit. The fruit laxative extractis made into tablets, and sold under the name of "Fruitand sold under the name of "Fruittives" or "Fruit Liver, Tablets." These
