In addition to these false representations of the Huron Gazette, there is one sentence of the deadly leader for which the author merits our contempt for his strogant presumption, he says— Two or three young men, whose names have been handed us, avowed their participation in the sentiments of Mr. Macqueen." [It is not necessary for me here to repeat that no political pinions had been expressed by Mr. Macqueen,] but even, pray, what right has the Editor of the Huron Gazette with the names of individuals or their sentiments either? Or has he established himself amongst us as an inquisitor gene ral and dictator-in-chief of the spy system.

It is rather unpleasant for me, Mr. Editor, to address you on such a subject, -but for fourteer years that I have resided in this community. I have known of no case where political feelings were allowed to interfere with our public proeeedings, (excepting, perhaps, in election times); and I hope all good men will unite, not only to condemn the mean and slanderous design. but also to reprobate the attempt of the Huron Gezette to throw the tirebland of party spirit amonget us. BERATFORD, 27th Oct., 1848.

To THOMAS MACQUEEN, Esq. Sin .- We have observed with surprise and regret, an article in the Huron Gazette of the Oc 20th current, in reference to the Agricultural Show here on the 13th, and containing remarks reflecting on your character and reputation, not only as a conductor of the Public Press, but as s subject of Her Majesty.

We most unhesitatingly pronounce the animus or intention of that article, as false and libelous and express our detentation of any person who would so willingly give currency to such a malicious report through the columns of a news

You, Sir, so far from acting as represented in the Huron Gazette, acted at the dinner to th satisfaction of those present, (excepting two or three who knew not what they were saying or doing, and who acknowledged afterwards that they were in error), both in reply to the toast of "the Press," and also in your remarks as to the benefits derived from manufactures and agri-culture,—and nothing was said by you, to which the most hypercritical could object. We add an expression of our thanks to you for the visit you gave us at the Agricultural Show and Floughing Match, and the handsome manner in which you noticed the same in your paper of the 20th.

We respectfully are, Sir,

But to show the sincerity with which these informant together,—to give currency be party' are then described as exhibiting the most uprofrous and ferocious conduct towards an individual who was a stranger amongst them:—tepresenting our meeting, indeed, as not of very superior character, and to the reach of the fluron Batterio, the Dinner, prepared by Thomas Douglas of the Roll has been very inferior to their four-footed compeers.
