Mungo Park's Explorations.

No man ever carried a stouter heart to brave the perils of the unknown than Mungo Park, a young Scottish ship surgeon, who in 1795 set sail from Portsmouth to explore the dark lands of West Africa. He knew that his predecessor, Major Houghton, had sacrificed his life after great hardships and sufferings, in a similar venture, but he was quite ready to pay the same price in the cause of civilisation. His instructions were to discover and trace the course of the River Niger, and he started from Freetown on his perilous journey with only a couple of negro servants for escort, two slave merchants, a Mohammedan black, and a negro blacksmith, with a stock of beads, amber and tobacco, for barter with the natives. For three months he travelled through the most terrible hardships and dangers, and was warned at every stage that he would not come out of the venture alive. Suffering from the tortures of thirst, suffocated by sandstorms, scorched by the heat of the sun, plundered by natives, and in constant danger of the forest beasts, he at last arrived at the border of the Moorish kingdom of Luddamar. The Moors treated him with the greatest insolence, hissing, shouting and abusing him, spitting in his face, opening his bundles and robbing him of everything they fancied. The fact that he was unprotected, a Christian, and a suspected spy, were sufficient to drive every spark of humanity from the heart of a Moor. They came to him with the news of the doom that had been passed upon him, one, that he was to be put to death; another, that his right hand was to be cut off; a third, that his eyes were to be put out; but all agreed that the sentence was not to be executed until Fatima the queen, had first seen him. For a whole month he was subjected to indignities and persecutions, until he was reduced to a state of exhaustion. He was then presented to Queen Fatima, who, to his surprise and delight gave him an amiable reception and presented him with food. With regained strength he was inspired with new hope, and on what was to him a never to be forgotten day, July 23, 1795, he made his escape.

But great as his perils had been before his capture, they were greater now as a fugitive. Chased by the Moors, plundered by wandering bands, subsisting on shrubs, he was reduced to a greater state of exhaustion than before, until a "good Samaritan," an old peasant woman, befriended him. Continuing his journey, at last, barefooted, tattered, and half dead, he reached Sego, where he fell in with a roving band of Kaartans, who treated him with every kindness, and welcomed him to their band. A few days later, Park says: "I saw with infinite pleasure the object of my mission in the long sought for, majestic Niger, glittering in the morning sun, as proud as the Thames at Westminster; and, drinking of the water, lifted up my fervent thanks in prayer to God, for having thus far crowned my endeavours with success."

He had numerous further adventures and hairbreadth escapes, while fever brought him to the verge of the grave at Kamala. On his recovery he fell in with a slave caravan, and was allowed to accompany them, a journey of 500 miles, to the Gambia, and ultimately he arrived at Freetown, his starting point, a ragged, unkempt "wild man of the woods," to be greeted by his friend, Dr. Lindley, with great joy and satisfaction, as one risen from the dead.

Stocking Banks.

The postal savings banks are out for the money hidden away in various crude, old-time caches—such as the decrepit teapot in the cupboard, the kitchen clock, the mattress and the stocking suit. Great wealth awaits the successful profiteers in these rich unworked lodges. The first French effort under Ferdinand de Lesseps to dig the Panama canal was financed largely by funds secreted in those ways among the peasants. Part of the western shore of Newfoundland is still called the Gold Coast because of treasure earthbound in cans, interred by those who lost confidence in banks after two disastrous failures at St. John's. Every such collapse means a further withdrawal of timorous investors and depositors, many of them aliens, who for years are they came here carried all their worldly goods about with them where they wandered. Part of the work of Americanization rightly may be to engender in the new arrival a warranted confidence in the fiscal solvency of banking institutions. The postal savings bank pays a low rate of interest. But any rate of interest is more than the cracked sugar bowl or the threadbare stockings as a mere productive repository of returns. It is the Scriptural story of the buried talent over again. —The Democrat.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

HOPE.

There is no hope for the beasts of the field.
They suffer pain and die,
Their young become the hunter's yield.
One bitter, anguished cry
Marks the despair which death has wrought.
Love has been theirs, but all for naught.
But hope God gave to woman and man
Who see their loved ones die,
And ever since first this world began
Though we wonder and question why
Hope whispers low; you shall love again,
And joy shall follow your hours of pain.
Death is death to the beasts of earth,
But man has a soul divine,
And the passing on is a royal birth
To an everlasting line.
And hope shines out through the darkest day,
They still live on who have gone away.

Seal Hunters.

HAVE NO FAITH IN AERIAL SURVEY.

ST. JOHN'S, N.F., July 5.—New-fangled contraptions find little favor in the eyes of the Newfoundland sealers, and so a plan introduced this season to use airplanes for locating the seal herds failed of acceptance by the seasoned sealing skippers. The eyes of an airman cannot beat the skill of a seafaring man wise in wind and weather, said the skeptics. Aviators flew over the vast ice fields from Labrador south to the Grand Banks during the sealing season and claimed to have found the main seal herd 200 miles from the region where the sealing fleet was operating. "Nonsense," said the seal hunters, and went on about their business. The airman offered to sell their information to the Newfoundland government for $40,000 and they offered it to the owners of the sealing fleet for the same figure. The season waned, and neither government nor ship owners would deal. Finally when the sealing was over and the fleet had dispersed, the aviators agreed to accept 10 cents a seal for their information. It was too late and so the "seals-from-the-air" theory has never been tested.

Hunters claim that the main body of seals was where they killed their catch, and in proof point to the harvest of 120,000 carcasses, 20 per cent more than that of 1921. The old hand at the hunting studies wind and weather for weeks before the season opens, and then follows his experience and instinct. As for spotting seals from the air, he says no green man is to be trusted with that job. Even experienced sealers admit that nothing is easier than to exaggerate the number of seals visible from the crow's nest of a ship, let alone an airplane.—The News, Washington.

Queen Alexandra

HAS SECRET OF PERENNIAL YOUTH.

LONDON.—Queen Alexandra, the Queen Mother, now in her 78th year, is far more active than most women of her age. She might take life far easier than she does, but she evidently is exposed to the idea of being laid on the shelf. She likes to show herself among the people and she is gratified by the applause with which her appearance always is greeted. Undoubtedly it acts as a sort of psychological tonic upon her and helps her to feel as young as she looks. She crowds many activities into a day. One day recently she appeared in public at the Cart Horse Parade for prizes in Regent's Park; then at a concert in aid of workshops for disabled soldiers, and finally at the Richmond Horse Show. But she makes two concessions to advancing years. She seldom goes out of an evening and she goes to bed early, usually playing a game of "Patience" before retiring.
