Heartless Laws Make Marriage No Easy Matter.

Moscow.—When the American Congress passed the law annulling the previous rule that a foreign woman automatically became an American citizen by marrying an American, it put Herculean difficulties in the path of Dan Cupid in the document-cursed countries of Eastern Europe, most frequented by a certain new type of young American men at an age when they are very susceptible to pretty foreign girls and matrimony.

The American Relief Administration, the Near East Relief, the Y. M. C. A. and other organizations which since the war have conducted relief operations in Poland, Austria, Greece, Russia, the Balkans and the Baltic states, sent hundreds of young Americans into cities noted for their charming girls.

Before the law became effective last September, marriages of Americans to these girls was relatively easy, although even then it involved digesting into records for documents, more documents and still more documents. Once this was accomplished, however, all the young American had to do was to go to the nearest American consulate, have his wife's photograph pasted on his passport, and if he was ready, could take her home an automatic American citizeness and show her proudly to his folks.

But to-day things are different. A few weeks ago one young member of the Near East Relief mission in Armenia got a brief vacation and came through Moscow to his way to Warsaw to marry there a lovely Polish girl who had waited for him two years. They had met when he was with the American Red Cross and she a nurse on the Polish battlefields against the Russians.

"I'll be back in ten days; save a room for us at the hotel," the American said blithely and confidently as he left Moscow.

Six weeks later he returned with his bride, having miraculously untangled miles of red tape and overcome, with the assistance of every official, Polish and American alike in Warsaw and Moscow, obstacles that left both bride and groom too tired to enjoy a honeymoon.

In Poland a woman automatically takes on the citizenship of her husband and, therefore, should lose her Polish passport. American rules, due to the new law, prevent consuls from pasting foreign wives' pictures on husbands' passports. One cannot enter Russia without a passport, and it is particularly difficult for a Polish subject to secure a visa to enter Russia at all. American law required this couple to have two passports, his American, her Polish. Polish law and the Russian difficulties in the way of Poles entering required them to have one, and this American.

Finally the young man prevailed upon the Polish authorities to give him a Polish passport, and upon an American consular official to give him a letter stating the couple had been legally married, although the bride was not an American citizen. The worried bridegroom pasted his wife's picture on the letter, attached the letter to his own passport, and finally got through.

Italy Wants Tinned Fish Marked.

Italy some months ago received shipments of tinned fish and sardines that were, so report says, far from wholesome. The Government health department tried to trace the origin of the goods but the labels had been detached and the search proved futile. Now the Italian Government has enacted a decree that all tinned fish imported must bear on the tin the distinctive markings, a description of the contents, the name of the packer and the country of origin. Representations were made to the Italian administrative authorities through the Canadian trade representative at Milan, as the request of the Canadian Fisheries Association, to have the decree modified in view of its impracticability. It was impossible to know at the time of packing what quantity should be marked for the Italian market and it would be a heavy expense to mark all the tins, and, in some cases, unsatisfactory to distributors. The authorities at Rome took the view, however, that the marketing was not impracticable and that all countries exporting fish were put on the same footing. Concessions were granted in that the application of the decree was deferred and the ruling was given that a paper pasted on the cover would be considered an indelible marking and that embossing would not be exacted. It was further pointed out by Rome that there seemed to be little reason why Canadian trade in this commodity should be considerably increased in view of the fact that the customs duty of 45 lire per quintal, which works out at 168 lire per hundred kilos, or four cents (Canadian) per one-pound tin, has been removed. The Canadian Trade Commissioner remarks that there seems little prospect of getting further alterations in the decree and he is inclined to the opinion that the enactment may come as a blessing in disguise to Canadian canners by eliminating intermediaries and advertising Canadian products as such.

Gives up Rhodesian Claims.

LONDON, Aug. 9 (A.P.)—The case of the British South African Company, known as the "Chartered Company," which some time since asked for sovereign rights in Rhodesia, has been settled. The British Government will pay the company $18,750,000 and the claim will be withdrawn. The company has been operating in Rhodesia for 83 years.

All About Our Peers.

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE HOUSE OF LORDS.

The Parliament is the only one left in the world composed of hereditary peers. In other countries the Upper House, in the Lower, is elected. Very soon, probably, we shall see the ending of the sort come to pass for the present Government is pledged to reform the House of Lords, to make of it a more popular representative body. Our House of Lords, as at present constituted, is the oldest legislative assembly in the kingdom, antedating by some two centuries the House of Commons. It has two distinct functions, the making of laws, which it shares with the Commons, and the interpretation of laws, with which latter the Commons have nothing whatever to do. As a final Court of Appeal, its decisions are absolute, and cannot be overruled or set aside by any assembly, or by any individual, save except, the King himself.

This Supreme Court is almost entirely devoid of the dignified traditions of the lower courts. It sits under an oblong table covered with brown cloth, and the Lord Chancellor, who usually presides, alone wears a wig and gown. The other members present wear ordinary morning dress. The impression prevails that only the Law Lords, who are supposed to be chosen on account of their legal knowledge, take part in these deliberations, and usually this is so in fact. But in theory every peer has a right to assist in this Court of Appeal, whether he knows any thing of law or not, and whether he has any interest or none in the particular case under consideration.

Members of the Upper House attend in response to a writ, which is sent to each Peer. This he has to present to the Clerk of House before he sits, and that official responds calls out his name and title into the Hall of the House.

A new Roll is compiled for each Parliament, and is solemnly presented to the Clerk by the Secretary of State, who comes into the House wearing his tabard, a special, sleeveless jacket emblazoned with heraldic devices. This Roll, on which the names of the Peers appear in order of precedence, is an actual roll, and is wound round a roller. When consulted, it is seen to consist of a long strip of parchment, some inches wide. There is no Better Highways in 1923 to Absorb $288,000,000.

Washington, Aug. 8.—The 1923 road construction season is expected to add many hundreds of miles to the country's system of improved highways. Figures compiled by the Bureau of Good Roads of the Department of Agriculture from 21 selected states show they will have available $288,000,000 for this purpose, compared to $278,000,000 spent by them last year. On federal-aid work, which constitutes something like one-half the total mileage, there was under construction March 31 work estimated to cost $283,000,000, as compared with $233,000,000 one the same date a year ago.

Old Age and Disability.

Some of the facts established by the laws of mortality and of business are pertinently set forth in the company paper of the Travelers. It is pointed out that the expectation of life at birth is 51 years. Those who survive the vicissitudes of early life and attain fifty years of age have a further expectation of about 20 years. The age when man is capable of the most sustained physical endurance ranges from 29 to 32 years. In industry the full vigor and productivity does not extend beyond 45. The death rate at 40 is nearly three times what it is at 20. At age 65, with some rare exceptions a man is well on the way downward from the peak of his activity. It is the economic danger of age. The possibility of meeting these hazards of death, of old age, and of permanent disability has three one door only—insurance. Insurance allows a man to discount them all in advance of their occurrence.
