

ANNABEL

THE TEMPTATION.

CHAPTER XXXVII.

BARNARD HAYES AND DICK MATTOCKS IN SE-CRET CONFERENCE, AS THEY SUPPOSE.

"Well, you haven't hurried yourself in coming. Why the devil have you been so long?" growled Dick.

"Because it wasn't convenient for me to come sooner," returned the lawyer, as he pounced eagerly on the "creature comforts" which in his assumed character he had had spoken of rather lightly.

"Wasn't it? Well you should have made it convenient, that's all."

"What's the matter? Anything wrong with Annabel? She hasn't managed to send another letter, I hope?"

"No—course it. I've taken precious good care of that, and neither has she got the chance of bolting again—the cunning little devil."

"Is there no fear of her getting such a chance to-night when you are absent? Well may not be so watchful as you."

"I haven't trusted to that," rejoined Dick. "See."

And he pulled from ample pocket a huge key.

"They are both locked in," he added, "and when I go back I can get admittance for myself. This makes all safe, don't it?"

"Well, yes, I should think so," said Hayes, continuing to eat as he spoke. "But now, what do you want that you wrote twice for me to come?"

"I want to have this business ended," said Dick, savagely. "Moll and I are tired of staying by ourselves in the old house. We want to go back to Liverpool."

The lawyer looked keenly at his companion's face, and for some moments said nothing. Then he merely uttered the monosyllable—

"Well."

"Well," echoed Dick, "and we mean to do it."

"How?" inquired the lawyer, in a steady tone.

"Why that's for you and I to settle. What's the use of going on like this? The girl may live for years, and I see no good in that. It's a misery for herself as well as for us."

"Just so, and you would propose to—"

"Exactly," growled Dick, with a nod.

"To—?" repeated Hayes, inquiringly.

"Oh, curse it, you know what I mean—to put her out of the way."

Barnard Hayes heard the damnable proposal with unchanged countenance. He was not shocked, he did not even change colour. It seemed to be something which he was quite prepared for—which he even approved of.

"How would you do it?" he quietly asked. "Do it safely, I mean?"

"Oh, easy enough—by poison. Nobody here is likely to make any inquiry about the death of a mad woman, which of course they think her to be, and as they also believe her to be my sister there is still less fear of anything being suspected."

"So there is—On the whole, Dick, I see little difficulty or danger either; and the fact is, the thing is desirable for another reason—Weston has come home."

"Weston home!" cried Dick, almost leaping from his seat; "and how does he take her death?"

"He's devilish cut up. Never saw a man so miserable. 'Pon my word, Dick, you would pity him if you saw him."

"Would I?" hissed Dick. "Nothing would do me more good than to see him. Oh, I should rejoice to see him suffer. Haven't I cause? Didn't he spoil my game and smash my arm to a jelly, and make it that it hasn't been good for much since?"

Iron in the Blood

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution of the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food. It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by Toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the System. The enriched and purified blood permeates every part of the body, repairing wastes, and searching out and driving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success of this remedy in curing Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhea, Bolls, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints, and all diseases originating in a bad state of the blood, or accompanied by debility or a low state of the system. Being free from Alcohol, in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures, to strong, healthy, and happy men and women; and it will cure almost any debility or disease to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass. Pamphlets Free.
