The Scrap Bag.

"I never use window screens," said a wise housekeeper. "I buy five cents' worth of oil of lavender at the drug store and mix with it the same quantity of water. Then I put it in a common glass atomizer and spray it around the rooms wherever files are apt to congregate, especially in the dining room, where I sprinkle it plentifully over the table linen. The odor is esespecially disagreeable to flies, and they will never venture in its neighbor-hood, though to most people it has a peculiarly fresh and grateful smell."

Studs for the summer girl's waist are shown in great variety. They are sold in sets of three, attached to a fine gold chain. For the sentimental young woman there are heart shaped gold studs, with a tiny seed pearl in the center. Others show a very small green garnet, incased in gold, while still others are of white enamel, decorated in gold to match the link cuff buttons. The most elaborate of these are of gold studded with jewels. The white and gold effects, with rococo decorations, cost $12.

"Let ladies encourage their servants by praising them when they do anything well." "Yes; praise is a great stimulant; we all like praise - high and low—one with another—rich and roor; old and young; man and woman; bey and girl. The poet writes better the more you praise him; the novelist does his best when he is praised; so does the painter; so does the actor; so does the servant. Praise your plain family cook, dear madam; praise her with judgment; then shall she pass from the chrysalis stage or plain family cook and put on the wings of a butterfly or a dragonfly, and become an artist, in-deed.—Exchange. Nothing is better for brittle nails than to rub them occasionally with refined vaseline. To improve the shape of the finger tips and make them graceful and tapering, pinch them after each washing of the hands. A few months of this treatment will make a decided change in the appearance of the hands. A bow-shaped piaza can be made a very pleasant summer room with but little trouble. A few awnings that work in the fashion of Venetian blinds, some low-cushioned seats where the youngsters can rest comfortably, wicker rockers, with all conveniences for summer beverages, a plant or two, and you have as charming a lounging place as one could wish.

Before M. Pasteur's system was invented about nineteen persons annually were officially reported to have died of hydrophobia. Now, strange as it may seem, the number of persons who annually report themselves bitten by rabid animals averages from 1,500 to 2,000. Rabies is a rare disease, rarer today than in the past, and hydrophobia is more or less a form of hysteria.

Were there less talk about it it would be better for the community. A little more knowledge of our own nervous system, a little less ignorance of the dogs, and we shall be far more likely to escape hydrophobia entirely than to die from it or to be saved by inocula-So great is the popular dread of hydrophobia that a slight derangement ther-before there is a chance of determining the nature of his disease. A New York woman who is just about to leave town for her cottage by the sea was heard to declare the other day that she had packed three big trunks and two boxes with nothing but cushions for her summer house, and she wasn't quite sure that she had enough to make the house comfortable factory, and keep down after all. Such is the importance of cushions in the country house. Every room requires a certain number of cushions and down pillows, including the plazza. Some of the new ham-mock cushions are made of Japanese Komo matting, which is soft and cool to the head and proof against dampness. Cushions made of sail cloth and embroidered in flax thread are suitable for hammock use. A much quoted paragraph from the other side is going the rounds, which tells us the Princess Maud of Wales, is very fond of riding a blcycle; that now royalty has taken up the wheel the last of the objectors to the sport will cease to be heard from. It also adds the interesting information that Princess Maud does not wear bloomers, but rides in the skirts of her riding habit, and that she is as fond of horses and rides as much as ever,
