CHAPTER XXIV. One by one the men-servants returned; but none of them had any news of Sir Karl. No one had either seen or heard anything of him. When the clock struck eight Lady Allanmore came down stairs, looking the ghost of herself. The servants gazed at her in wonder, as at one over whom great calamity hung. She sent for John

"Give orders, Frodsham, at once." John Frodsham did so; and she felt some little relief. But she could not rest. She wandered from room to room, through the grounds and gardens, and along the terraces, always with the vague idea that she would find Sir Karl or hear of him.

Then she became conscious of something that annoyed and perplexed her. Wherever she went in the house she found groups of servants whispering. They broke off abruptly when they her; and in each face she perceived a peculiar expression, as though they knew something, but could not, or would not, impart it. She felt as though an atmosphere of mystery surrounded her. Ah, if he would come—the sight of him would dispel all this! Office she sooke to the women-servants more sternly than she had ever spoken to them before.

"Is there anything kept from my knowledge," she asked; "that you whisper together and look so strange?"
"No, my lady," was the answer, but one by one they stole away lest she should ask them more. Lord Rhysworth was the first who He looked supprised at the beatiful white face-the face he had always seen so bright and radiant, but which was now so full of terrible pain. "So your groom told me, my dear Lady Allanmore; and most grieved and distressed am I to hear it. You know you may rely upon me. I am entirely at your service. What would you wish me to do?"

"I cannot tell. It is a trouble so new and bewildering that I cannot determine what to do."

'Do you know in what direction Sir Karl went, or the nature of his business?" asked Lord Rhysworth. 'No, I do not; and it is that which distresses me so. He told me that he would explain all to me when he re-

Looking up suddenly, she saw Lord Rhysworth's eyes fixed upon her with the same expression that she had seen in the servants, and which had so greatly annoyed her.

"You know something," she said,
"and you are keeping it from me." Before he had time to answer, the door opened, and the Squire entered.

"Dolores, what is this I hear?" he "Sir Karl gone! What in heaven's name does it mean?

"Gone, papa!" she repeated, in helpless bewilderment. "No one said he had gone! He is missing, and I am afraid some accident has happened to "Missing! He must be somewhere, child! How ill you look, my darling! What a trouble this is to fall upon your dear head!" and the Squire took his daughter in his arms and kissed the sweet, pale face over and over again. "My poor, pretty darling, I can hardly comprehend that such trouble should come to you."

"My very name means sorrow," she The Squire looked at her piteously. His face wore the same expression that had seen on Lord Rhysworth's; and she cried: "You know something, papa, and you are keeping it from me."

"Sit down, my darling," returned the Squire, "and tell me all that passed after I went home. I left you talk-

Then quite unexpectedly she caught the giance that passed between the squire and Lord Rhysworth. It was

"They're all puzzled, my dear, I should imagine," he replied; "and it is a puzzle.

She clung to him with weeping eyes. "Do you think any ascident has happened to him?" she asked; and the Squire shook his head gravely.

"No, Dolores, I do not. "Then where can he be? Oh, papa, bring him back to me-do bring him back! I must see him! You have been kind to me all my life; be doubly kind to me now; bring him to me. I-I cannot live without him!" She turned her miserable face to Lord Rhysworth. "Help me!" she cried-"help me to find Sir Karl!" 'My dear lady, we will do all that we can," he answered. She flung up her arms in despair. "He will never come back again," she wailed. "I have felt it in my heart all along; it was too bright to -too bright! I told him so, and he laughed at me. Papa, it will kill me!"

"Nay, my darling, you must live for and for the children, replied the Squire. "Besides, you must not give up hope yet. Lord Rhysworth will drive me over to Deeping, and we will get men to search the woods. Take courage.

But her heart was heavy with dread. They left her, and were absent many hours. She looked so white, and was so fragile and heart-broken, when they returned, that tears came into Lord Rhysworth's eyes. The children were with her. She raised her pallid face, but it seemed as though all power of speech had left her. The Squire spoke first. We have no news, Dolores-neither good nor bad; we have not heard or seen anything of him." With a faint sigh she laid her head on his breast. "My darling," cried the Squire, you must not give way in this fashion; you must not indeed! Try to rouse your-self. Suppose an accident has happened to your husband, and he wants careful pursing; you will be quite unit to help him. Promise me now, to take some nourishment, and then I will tell you something."

"I will," she gasped. In silence the Squire poured out some wine, and in silence she drank it. Was and Peterboro seems sure to score it her fancy, or did she hear the Squire Then the London line braces up. whisper to Lord Rhysworth, "We had better tell her; she must know it. I fear it is true."

listen to what you have to say. "I am in great trouble, Lord Rhys-worth," she said. Sir Karl left me last mere surmise; but what we know to be true we will lay before you; and although it goes to my heart to do it, I must. First, do you remember that Karl received a letter yesterday morning which seemed to distress him very much? He declined to show it to you, although you asked him to do so. The reading of that letter completely changed him, if you remember; he was not himself all day; he neither spoke nor smiled. We both remarked it; even the servants noticed it, and thought that he was not well. I want you to bear all this in mind; it is one link in the chain of evidence. Then, after looking miserably unlike himself all day, he told us that he could not drive me home at night, because he had an appointment. When we asked him about it, he seemed distressed and anxious. The inference that I draw from all this is, that the person who wrote the letter is the person he went to see. I do not think there is any doubt about this, do you Rhysworth?"

'No, I do not," was the reply. Dolores raised her fair head with a look of redief.

That seems clear, papa. I wonder I did not think of it before. As you say, that letter completely changed I remember his face as he thrust the letter into his pocket; he was not like himself after that. The note troubled him, I am sure. To be Continued.

PETERBORO AGAIN DEFEATED. The Peterboro football team came to the city on Saturday with the idea that they were world-beaters, and that the London team wouldn't have a 'look-in," but before they left Tecumseh Park they received a rude awakening to the tune of 14 to 1, with London hugging the large end of the tally. The crowd that witnessed the game was the largest of the season, doubtless brought out by the fact that Peterboro protested the previous match, without any good grounds, merely on a tech-The weather was all that nicality. The weather was all that could be wished for, and the London, boys were in the best of trim, having trouble in landing the championship. Henderson, of Toronto University, called the teams to the center of the field at 3 p.m. sharp. The customary warning to be good was imparted, and the 30 men faced each other waiting for the word. The line-northwest breeze. A fake kick along the line gives London the ball near center. scrimmage works well, and Hobbs passes to Gibbons, who punts. Burnham returns with a long kick, and Taylor misses the catch. The visitors rush the ball to ten yards from the London line, and Gilmour drops on it. On the next exchange of punts the ball is held within two yards of London's goal line. Only two minutes of play, Hobbs plunges through to center for a gain. Frank Reid comes from the half line with a rush, and Hobbs and Taylor plunge through for a ten-yards gain. Peterboro misses the ball, and Field drops on it. Then the Lonthrough for a tendon line hammers away at the Peterbor center, pushing them steadily back. The Peterboro backs kick well, but London's wings swoop down like hawks and pin them to the ground. Peterboro gets the ball on their own 25-yard line, and McDonald tries through, helped by the half-backs. Twice he is thrown for a loss, and then passes to McWilliams, who is downed in his tracks. Hobbs has the ball, and London again attacks the Peterboro Reid, Hobbs and Taylor break through for short gains, and the leather is within five yards of Peterboro's Hobbs goes at the center, and Reid and Frank Taylor boost him through. He is tackled and makes a short pass to Taylor, who throws himself across the line for the first try. The kick is a difficult one, and Taylor fails to convert it. Score, 4-0. Peterboro's kick off does not travel the required distance, and they try it again. The wings fumble. "Sal" Taylor gets the ball, and gains three yards. It is London's ball, and Hobbs is working behind a scrimmage that goes like machinery. He passes to Umpire Mulien, mistaking that gentleman for Gilmour. However, Blondine gets the leather and kloks into touch. Peterboro tries a signal play on the throw in, but loses the ball. London again kicks into touch, and Capt. Me-Williams tries another signal trick. The play is broken up by the London wings, who crush the Peterboro wedge like paper. Holbbs gets the ball 40 yards out, and makes a long pass to Frank Taylor. With three Peterboro wings dashing toward him the halfback steadies himself and tries a drop which goes over the bars, and the whistle goes for half-time. Score,

In the second half Peterboro tries a fake kick, but London's forwards were on the ball as soon as their own men, and nothing is gained. Frank Reid is right up on the wing line and London is playing only two halves. They crush through the Peterboro forwards for twenty yards, and Gilmour kicks far across the Peterboro goal line. Gib-bons, Field and Kerrigan are on the ball, and Scott rouges. Score-Vic McWilliams takes the ball out and kicks off quickly, getting down to center before the rush is stopped. Peterboro has the ball and her line braces up. McPherson gains a couple and Burnham punts away over London's line. Labatt gets the ball, but it is so far back that he wisely touches it, and gives Peterboro a point. Score, 10-1. Taylor takes the kick out and makes a good drop to center, where Peter-boro fumbles and loses the ball. London gets a throw-in, and works a signal that gains ten yards. Peterboro tries a run around the end, and Hollingshead is tackled and falls hard on point of his shoulder, and has to retire, Cavanagh taking his place. London works the ball near the Peterboro on short plunges through center, and loses it for offside play. Peterboro punts to Taylor, who makes his mark and returns well. Burnham catches and is away. Field has him but he passes to McPherson, who dashes from the Peterboro 25-yard line. He is by Gilmour like a deer and the London wings stream after him. He gets through the whole London line, and nothing is between the big half-back and a sure touch-down but little Hugh Labatit, who tackles him in brilliant style, and succeeds in flooring him amidst tremendous applause. It was the most brilliant run of the day, and the best tackle of the game. Peterboro makes its last attempt to score, when Burnham punts over the line. La-

The London play is so fast that the Peterboro men cannot follow it, and finally Hebbs worms his way through the center for a touth-down.
