MANY VISITORS ATTEND SERVICE

The largest congregation in the history of the York Street Mission marked the Christmas night service, attended by many visitors from all parts of the city. Evangelist T. L. Becker preached and the exceptionally fine musical program included a solo by Mrs. Cameron Wilson, wife of the mayor-elect, who sang in public for the first time since coming to London, and vocal and violin numbers by Mrs. H. A. Kingsmill and Mr. Sidney Kingsmill. Dr. H. A. Stevens, M. P., gave a short address, in which he eulogized the work of the mission and its far reaching influence, paying a tribute to the preaching ability of Mr. Becker and especially his sermon on the birth of Christ.

Mr. Becker's theme was the "Birth of Christ." In the course of his sermon he emphasized the point that Jesus Christ is the pivot on which the history of the world has turned. Of such supreme importance was His birth that all events previous to it date back from it, and all subsequent events forward from the coming of the babe in the manger in Bethlehem.

"Infinite and believer alike, wittingly or unwittingly, ever find time to date a letter or sign a document pay tribute to Jesus Christ," said the preacher.

Following her solo, Mrs. Wilson was presented with a beautiful bouquet of flowers by little Margaret Worrell.

Selects Ten "Best Photoplays of 1921"

BY JAMES W. DEAN.
NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—The ten best photoplays of 1921—their selection is almost entirely one of personal opinion. That holds true in the selection of the best books of the year, or any list of the "best" of anything.

A selective list furnishes a standard to measure the critic who makes it as much as it establishes a measure of the films passed upon.

Therefore this critic in submitting a list of the films he considers the best produced from Jan. 1, 1921, to Jan. 1, 1922, realizes that he makes himself a subject of criticism.

Gliding up my typewriter and setting myself for the onslaught I proceed to say that the ten best photoplays of the year 1921 are:

"The Three Musketeers."
"The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari."
"The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse."
"Miss Lulu Bett."
"The Kid."
"Disraeli."
"Doubling for Romeo."
"Passion."
"Peter Ibbetson."
"The Janner End."

"The Three Musketeers" undoubtedly is the best photoplay yet produced. It possesses unity of action and characterization. It is a play of serious intent shot through with humor. Action lags for never a moment. Its technique is flawless, its settings and photography approaching perfection. It was offered at the Grand Theatre, London, Ont.

I was of a mind when first considering the list to place "The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari" in first position. That film marks the biggest advance in the art of the cinema since the first photoplay was made in "Tom Kiddle" neither literature, portraiture nor drama. It represents a form that employs, each of those elements, yet is distinct unto itself, a form that for want of a better name I designate as cinema composition.

However, the Caligari film had to resort to cubistic setting and an irrational story to achieve its effect.

In ten years the cinema composer will be an established figure in the world of art. He or she, will be neither author, playwright or painter.

To give reasons for each of the selections would require too much space. I will say alone in "The Kid" would make it worthy of a place in any list. That was the expression in Chaplin's face when he was informed that the kid was ill. That was the greatest bit of facial action ever caught by the camera.

Anna May Wong. She's the daughter of a laundry man and has appeared in several movies. Her biggest role was in "Bits of Life."

I placed "The Journey's End" in the list because it told its story adequately without the aid of even one subtitle. In doing that it fulfilled the true mission of a photoplay.

Ten other photoplays considered at length for a place on the list were "The Old Nest," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "The Old Nest," "The Lotus Eater," "Deception," "Without Benefit," "Clay," "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford," and "Sentimental Tommy."

It was my pleasure to meet Mary Pickford several times during the year. I was no more doubtful about placing "The Little Lord Fauntleroy" among the first ten than I was about some which did find a place there. However, I felt that I might be biased in Miss Pickford's favor because of the personal impression she made upon me. For that reason I omitted her film from the first ten.

Padding injured the sincerity of "The Old Nest." The same is true of others in the secondary list. "Way Down East" was not considered because of anachronisms in characters and settings.

The list as it stands is not entirely representative. It does not include short comedies and features. They will be considered in a supplementary list. The plays as listed might be classified as "feature" films.

FIVE LOSE LIVES FROM GAS FUMES

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 26.—Fumes from a defective gas heater caused the death of Gaetano Maimonti, his wife and three children on Saturday night as the family was preparing to celebrate the holiday.

Police called by neighbors, whose anxiety was aroused today by the fact that the Christmas trees in the Maimonti home had been brightly illuminated since Saturday night, while none of the family had been seen, broke a window and discovered the tragedy.

The bodies of Mrs. Maimonti and the children were found in their beds. Maimonti's body was found near his wife's bed, where he apparently had been overcome as he attempted to arouse his family.

The police believe Maimonti remained up after other members of the family retired, to decorate the Christmas tree; that with the task completed he lighted the gas heater, which had no pipe connection with the chimney, to heat water for his bath and that possibly he sat down to rest and fell asleep. He was aroused some time later by the fumes, officers believe, but was overcome before he could save his family.
