Sale of "Coppers" Chief Feature Present Week's Feast-Four Thousand Dollars for One

Vancouver, June 25.—The greatest potlach ever held in British Columbia is now in full swing at Alert Bay. Fully two thousand Indians, mostly of Tsimpseans, are taking part, and the Tsimpseans, are taking part, and the value of the goods that have been contributed by those attending must aggregate, say those who have seen the stacks of twenty-dollar gold pieces and bills of all denominations and piles of blankets and household goods, nearly $30,000. Indian girls of tender age have also been bartered to the wealthy chiefs of the neighboring districts urday. There are many white people at Alert Bay at the present time, and the Indians have welcomed them to their dances, but few of them have been allowed to see the inner work-ings of the great gathering. The shore of the inlet is one mass of canoes be-longing to the visiting Indians, a rea-sonable estimate placing the number sonable estimate placing the number at more than 500. Many of the dug-outs contain twenty paddles, and are to be bartered away with the rest of the goods, the owners trusting to good luck and the good humor of their companions to get back to their homes when the potlach is ended.

The dances are the largest that have ever been seen on the coast, about five hundred Indians taking part at each performance. The men are all dressed in the finest of native clothes, and riot of color is a scene that those have witnessed will never forget. Went to Highest Bidder

On Tuesday and Friday of last week there was a little celebration that no white people, not even the provincial constable, was allowed to witness. The story leaked out afterward. Two dusky madens of the Tsimpseans were sold to the highest bidders among the Indians. Prices were high, and only the most wealthy of the natives could bid.

One little girl of nine, who had been brought from Rivers Inlet, tall, fandsome and attractive even to the eyes of the white men who had seen her, of the white men who had seen her, was sold after spirited bidding for $1400. The two contestants for the little maiden were an old, grizzled Indian of fifty and a young man who was said to have come all the way from the Queen Charlottes to purchase a wife. There was a touch of romapce in the fight of May and December for the handsome little girl, who seemed to fully realize her position. The old man had the longer purse and she was handed over to him. The potlach treasury was enriched to the amount of her value. He purse and she was named over the him. The potlach treasury was enriched to the amount of her value. # FATALITY AT REVELSTOKE Captain Bacher Instantly Killed While Fitting Guys on a Dredge

A terrible accident attended by fatal results occurred Friday morning on the dredge shortly after 11 o'clock, says the Revelstoke Mail-Herald. It appears that the dredge hands were engaged in taking off and fitting new steel guys to the iron frame crane on which the dipper shaft for dredging is operated. Capt. Bacher, W. J. Banting. F. Harris and S. Dale were working at the extreme end of the crane, which was supported by a tackle, the old guy wires having been previously removed, and had supported the whole weight of the crane on three turns of half inch steel wire rope which was passed round the crane head below the sheave, into which was hooked the block of the supporting tackle. This apparatus had been in position for nearly an hour and the men were at the moment of the accident engaged fitting the new steel guys. Without a moment's warning the crane head fell, the block and tackle being violently hurled back to the deck of the dredge. Capt. Bacher was flung 6-ft.
