

were fill'd, might all have been secur'd.
These, if necessity, and the want of bread, had not influenced the western Indians to the offers of a peace, might have purchas'd them from the enemy's interest; what a glorious acquisition would this have been?
This, for which Great Britain has expended millions, might have been acquired without blood or money.

P T N I S

Wm. Woodcock