

cast off the old associations which fetter and bind them, to to us the inestimable rights of the Constitution—they leave the unstable structure their associates are endeavor—make public honors prizes open to all—they excite genius ing to sustain ere it falls with one fell crash—and to join and industry to their highest effort—they put an end to the that band whose names will yet be handed down to future trade of the slanderer—they confer on the people the blessing of a just and good Government ; and, I believe, will generations, and whose memories will live to be blessed, ings of a just and good Government ; and, I believe, will because they have struggled at every sacrifice for the principles which 'are strong with the strength, and immortal a British name. secure to us, for ages to come, the ennobling inheritance of with the immortality of truth.' These principles secure