SCHOOL TEACHING AS A SIDE ISSUE

That greatest and most successful of educationalists, the late Dr. Arnold of Rugby, is quoted as including among the qualifications essential to the due performance of a master's duties, "that the teacher should enter upon his work not as a side issue, but as a substantial and most important duty."

These are undoubtedly words of wisdom, the truth of which is not duly recognized to-day. There can be no doubt that the greatest weakness of our Public School system in Ontario is discovered in the fact that a large percentage of our pedagogues do enter upon their work "as a side issue." They use the school teaching profession as a stepping stone to something else—a means of putting themselves through for one or other of the professions. The result is that they do their school work in a perfunctory and inefficient manner to the end that the rising generation suffers a lack of proper training.

The reason for this is that our teachers are not properly paid, and the only remedy is to raise the standard of emolument in the profession. But, perhaps, in so vast an organization as the Ontario Public School system this was difficult. The extra expenditure entailed would be too heavy to be popular with the masses.

THE HARM OF OVER-EATING

The human race suffers more from over-eating than from under-eating. This is the dictum of the doctors. Most people eat too much. Just as many human beings starve because of a superabundance of food, as from an insufficient supply of it. Whenever the stomach is so overloaded that it cannot assimilate the material with which it is taxed, actual starvation of the body results. Men and women of sedentary habits are the worst sufferers in the way of over-eating, for their systems do not require anything like as much nutriment as do those of people of active habits or manual pursuits.

Regularity of meals, with about five hours between each, is requisite to good digestion. Another rule necessary of observance is that all severe mental and physical activities should be avoided for at least one hour after eating. The blood and nervous system should be allowed to rest, without hindrance, to assist the digestive apparatus in its work.

It is said that 80 per cent. of human physical ills are traceable to the stomach, and for the sake of health and comfort attention to these remarks will prove worth while.

ENGLAND AND CANADA

"Canada has viewed the Morgan ship-pling trust rather complacently. Its attitude has been something of a wonder to the Mother Country. But it has reason for its complacency. English financiers are, as indicated, beginning to think of doing what they can to develop the resources of the colony for purposes of self-defence. They talk now of creating Canadian lines which shall handle the products of Canada, of Canadian shipping ports and of steamship lines which shall carry these products from those ports to others across the Atlantic. This will please the Canadians very much, for they have an idea that they have been somewhat ignored and neglected in the past."—Buffalo Express.

There is perhaps something in what our American contemporary says. English capital has been slow to recognize the possibilities of investment in this country. We venture to say that if English capital which has hitherto turned its attention to the United States and other foreign countries would engage in the development of our pulp and paper forests, our iron and nickel mines, our fisheries and our agricultural resources, much financial and other benefit would accrue to Britain herself and the empire at large. Hereafter American capital has led the way in Canada, and it is high time is, perhaps, a more thorough military education than the Victoria Cross, for it is awarded for conduct and skill in action, rather than for the headlong valor which is now somewhat discounted by the ever-increasing needs for craft and skill in war. The statutes of the order were first issued from the War Office on Nov. 6, 1886. Foreign officers associated in the naval and military operations of the British forces are eligible to be honorary members; and the order ranks next to the Order of the Indian Empire. The badge, which consists of a gold cross, enamelled white, edged gold, having on one side thereof in the centre within a wreath of laurel, a helmet surmounted by a crown, and on the reverse, a similar wreath, and on a similar red ground, the Imperial and Royal cipher "E. R. L." is to be suspended from the breast by a red ribbon edged blue of one inch in width.

His Gallant Conduct.

Major Mason, or as he was known during the campaign, Lieut. Mason, distinguished himself by personal courage and leadership in the action of Feb. 18 at Paardeberg. In the earlier phases of the action he aided the cornet in the defence of the position, and reinforced the point in the firing line where he happened to be by causing the cornet to fire his command to open steady firing so as to cover the Cornwallis advance. When the charge took place he was one of a party of four officers who were near each other. Of these, two—Lieut. Col. Aldworth and Lieut. Col. B. J. D. Aldworth—were severely wounded. Lieut. Moneypenny subsequently died of his wounds. The two who survived were severely wounded. Lieut. Mason, however, was not near him. He was at the corner of the fight, and that at which the losses were the heaviest. He was the last of the officers to fall and the furthest forward.

Mentioned By Lord Roberts.
Major Mason was struck three times, his helmet and clothing being pierced before he received the wound which proved fatal. Lord Roberts, in his despatches laid stress upon this determined effort to break into the enemy's position in his first despatch referring to the honors list, he referred to it in the following terms: "The following officers have been killed in action or have died from the effects of wounds rendered, conspicuously valuable services. Had they survived, they should have brought their names prominently to your Lordship's notice."

Second Lieut. Moneypenny, Seaforth's, in a subsequent despatch Lord Roberts, after referring to the great number of troops engaged, points out how difficult it was to ascertain the facts regarding the services of officers, owing to the great hours of labor from Africa from England which were necessary, and accordingly asks that the names of the officers who were killed in the first instance, in this list appear the names of a number of Canadian officers: Majors Robert Cartwright, R.C.R.; W. A. Williams, R.C.D.; W. J. Forster, R.C.R.; G. E. San-

A THOUSAND THANKS.

JEAN BOUVIE IS VERY HEARTY IN HIS EXPRESSIONS OF GRATITUDE.

In Graceful Sentences He Pours Out His Praise of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the Remedy Which Has Done So Much for Him.
St. Elzeur, Que., May 16.—(Special)—It is a well-known characteristic of our French-Canadian people that they are fearless and enthusiastic in their praise of anything or anybody that has benefited them.
No one is more capable of gracefully and eloquently praising than the average French gentleman.
A recent case illustrates this point: Jean Bouvie, a French Canadian, who has been afflicted with a terrible malady of the kidneys.
He suffered a very great deal of pain, and his disease forced him to rise every hour during the night.
