There are cough medicines that are taken as freely as a drink of water from a dipper. They are cheap medicines. Quantity does not make up for quality. It's the quality that cures. There's one medicine that's dropped, not dipped-Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. There's more power in drops of this remedy than in dippersful of cheap cough syrups and elixirs. It cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Colds, Coughs, and affections of the Throat and Lungs.

Vivid Story of Martyrdom.

Rev. Dr. Talmage Draws a Lesson from the Stoning of Stephen.

The discourse of Dr. Talmage is a vivid story of martyrdom, and a rapturous view of the world to come. Text, Acts, vii., 56-60: "Behold I see the heavens opened," etc.

Stephen had been preaching a rousing sermon, and the people could not stand it. They resolved to do as men sometimes would like to do in this day, if they dared, with some preacher of righteousness-kill him. The only way to silence this man was to knock the breath out of him. So they rushed Stephen out of the gates of the city, and, with c rse and whoop, and bellow, they brought him to the cliff, as was the custom when they wanted to take away life by stoning. Having brought him to the edge of the cliff, they pushed him off, and seeing that ke was not yet dead, they began to drop stones upon him. Amid this horrible rain of mis-siles. Stephen, looking up, makes two prayers-one for himself and one for his murderers. "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit"; that was for himself."Lord, lay not this sin to their charge" that was for his assailants. Then, from pain and loss of brood, he swooned away and fell asleep.

I want to show you today five pictures. Stephen gazing into heaven, eases of the kidneys. In health these stoned. Stephen in his dying prayer. Stephen asleep.

changed since you saw them last. You wonder if they would recognize your face now, so changed has it been with trouble. You wonder if, amid the myriad delights they have, they care as much for you as they used to when they gave you a helping hand and put their shoulders under your burdens. You wonder if they look any older; and sometimes in the eveningtide when the house is all quiet, you wonder if you should call them by their first name if they would not answer; and perhaps sometimes you do make the experiment, and when no one but God and yourself are there you distinctly call their names and listen, and sit

The accords fully with popular feelence as a modern schoolgirl. Today he taught us, which John Quincy Adams, 70 years of age, said every night when he put his head upon his pillow:

We may be too feeble to employ concise, is so earnest, is so comprehen sive, we surely will be able to say that: enough for us. Perhaps it has treated us a great deal better than we deserve to be treated; but if on the dying pillow there should break the light of that better world, we shall have no regret about leaving a dark, damp house for one large, beautiful and capacious. That dying minister in Philadelphia some years ago, beautifully described it, when in the last moment he threw up his hands and cried out, "I move into one more picture, and that is Stephen asleep. With a pathos and simplicity peculiar to the Scriptures the text says of Stephen: "He fell asleep." Oh," you say, "what a place that was to sleep!" A hard rock under him, stones falling down upon him, the blood streaming, the mob howling. What a place it was to sleep!" And yet my text takes that symbol of slumber to describe his departure, so sweet was it, so contented was it, so peaceful was it, Stephen had lived a very laborious life; his chief work had been to care for the poor, but from the way he lived, and the way he preached, and the way he died, I know he was a laborious Christian. But that is all over now. He has pressed the cup to the last fainting lip. He has taken the last insult from his enemies. The last stone to whose crushing weight he is susceptible has been hurled.
