The testator, after directing payment of his debts, devised to his wife his household furnitive which was of trifling value and the devised to his wife his household furniture, which was of trifling value, and the balance of the rents arising or accruing from his homestead farm after payment thereout and therefrom of the sum of $200 per annum to his daughter. Susannah Brown, during her lifetime. He bequeathed the homestead farm to his grandsons, Leonard and Arthur Brown, but they were not to receive or be allowed possession thereof until after his wife's death, and his executars were to rent the farm sion thereof until after his wife's death, and his executors were to rent the farm in the meantime and pay the proceeds from the said rents as therein directed. Susannah Brown died in the lifetime of the testator. The first question was whether under the bequest of the balance of the rents, the whole of the rents received by the executor are payable to the widow the rents, the whole of the rents received by the executor are payable to the widow of the testator, or only the balance after $200 has been deducted annually. As a re-sult of the death of the daughter in the testator's lifetime, the balance of the rents, the net proceeds, amount, I think, to the whole of the rents, and the widow not promptly eliminated because of sick liver, bowels, skin or kidneys. Toronto General Trusts Corporation v. Kingsbury—R. C. H. Cassels, for the defendant, appealed from the judgment of the County Court of Carleton of Dec. 15, 1998; J. F. Orde, K.C., for the plaintiff, contra. This action was brought by plaintiffs, who are acting as trustees for a widow, Mrs. Patrick, who was the owner of lot 15, on the east side of Empressavenue, in the City of Ottawa. Her husband had owned said property for about thirty years. Between it and lot 8 to the north there was a fence bounding the property. In 1900 the defendant purchased lot 8. In a fire that year Mrs. Patrick's house was burned, and the shed at the rear of Kingsbury's house was damaged, and the fence to some extent obliterated. Later defendant moved his house back from the street line, and, as alleged, across the boundary, and as shown by a survey the shed is on plaintiff's land.
