Coveted!

COVETOUSNESS is far more than a simple desire for something we do not happen to possess. All too often it is an uncontrollable craving for something never rightfully to be ours, something wholly and properly the possession of another.

If the name and fame of RUBBERSET brushes, and such measure of success as may accrue to their originators, were not positively coveted by other brush makers there would be no imitations of the name, the process, or the general principles of square dealing which stand behind them.

But because RUBBERSETS are recognized as the world's standard quality article of their kind, and because less resourceful manufacturers find it easier to endeavor to share in their prestige rather than to originate more effective methods of manufacture for their own individual benefits, RUBBERSET brushes must ever be subjected to widespread imitation.

When you buy your next brush ask yourself this question: "Which will produce the brush I want, a manufacturing spirit based on imitation and covetousness, or the one spurred on by origination and quality perpetuation?" Brushes bearing the trade name RUBBERSET, as shown herewith, will be your answer!
