MRS. WILKES' BLESSING

Her Dearest Hopes Realized—Health, Happiness and Baby.

Plattsburg, Miss.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved very beneficial to me, for I am well and have a sweet, healthy baby, and our home is happy."

"I was an invalid from nervous prostration, indigestion and female troubles. Incessantly flooded with his Manitoba workers well supplied with funds."

The opposition cry was that reciprocity was dead, that the province should give endorsement to Borden by supporting Haultain. Before the campaign started Haultain in a public speech urged that he be supported in order to materially help Mr. Borden. During the fight the opposition badge showed pictures of Borden and Haultain with the motto, "Saskatchewan for Borden and Haultain."

On the other hand ex-Premier Scott, while standing on his record and policy, laid emphasis upon the question of wider markets and lower tariffs with an increase of the British preference. He took the ground that the Saskatchewan verdict in these elections would be interpreted throughout Canada as a declaration whether or not this province remained firm for free trade. The results show conclusively that Saskatchewan is more determined than ever that the dominion shall have free trade. Hundreds of Conservatives threw aside party affiliations and supported Scott because of his steadfastness in standing by reciprocity. Numbers of prominent former Haultain supporters came out on the platform in support of the Scott candidates.

Reciprocity won. In an interview today Haultain himself says: "I attribute the Liberal victory almost entirely to the strength of the reciprocity sentiment."

Prominent Haultain men admitted today that the result of the election is a serious blow to the Ottawa government. Mr. Rogers in directing the opposition campaign was recognized as representing Borden and the defeat of the Haultain Party was in reality the defeat of the federal ministry whose attitude toward the west was taking office became one of the big issues of the contest.

Conservatives also admit that the result of the election removes any doubt as to whether reciprocity will continue the biggest issue of Canadian politics.

Winnipeg, July 12.—The Tribune says it is reported here on good authority that a large deputation of western farmers will journey to Ottawa in the fall to take up with Premier Borden the question of wider markets.

Ottawa, July 12.—The Saskatchewan election is a vindication for our trade policy, it is a great victory for my friend Walter Scott, and a black eye for my friend Hon. Robert Rogers."

THE LIBERAL SWEEP IN SASKATCHEWAN

Regina, Sask., July 12.—Saskatchewan has declared that Canada must have wider markets and lower tariffs, that it has no desire to "materially help Mr. Borden" as Mr. Haultain asked the people to do by supporting his candidates, that it will not tolerate electioneering methods such as are followed by Hon. Robert Rogers.

These are the outstanding facts to be noted in considering the result of yesterday's poll in this province. With returns somewhat incomplete from half a dozen ridings it is practically certain that the result of polling in the fifty-two constituencies in which voting took place yesterday is: Liberal, forty-five; Conservatives, six; Independent, one.

This Independent, it should be noted, supported reciprocity, as did all the Liberal candidates. In two constituencies elections were deferred. Both will go Liberal. The fight was probably the bitterest in the history of any Canadian province.

Hon. Robert Rogers took charge of the Conservative campaign. The whole province was flooded with his Manitoba workers well supplied with funds.

The opposition cry was that reciprocity was dead, that the province should give endorsement to Borden by supporting Haultain. Before the campaign started Haultain in a public speech urged that he be supported in order to materially help Mr. Borden. During the fight the opposition badge showed pictures of Borden and Haultain with the motto, "Saskatchewan for Borden and Haultain."

Dangerous Atmosphere

By RUTH CAMERON

A WISE young school ma'am recently refused the opportunity to lodge in one of the finest houses in the town in which she taught. The opportunity came to her in this way. The house was owned by a young couple who were very well-to-do. The husband's business kept him away much of the time and the wife was lonesome. She didn't exactly want a hired companion, and having met and admired the young school teacher, conceived the idea of offering her a room in her beautiful home at a most reasonable rate, feeling sure that she would jump at the opportunity.

The school teacher thanked her graciously but, much to everyone's surprise, declined the offer. Her friends were astonished. "Have you seen the house?" they questioned.

She had. That beautiful front bedroom with the wonderful mahogany furniture, and the bay window and the rug? My dear, they say those rugs cost at least a hundred dollars apiece."

She had seen all that. "And yet, you are going to stay at Mrs. S's, where you sleep in a white iron bed and have oak furniture and cheap rugs. Will you tell me why? Don't you like Mrs. R.?" (the wealthy young woman.)

"Of course I do," retorted the school ma'am, "and I know the house is lovely, and I appreciate the things in it just as much as you do. I don't want to live in it. I'm afraid of the atmosphere."

"What do I mean by that? Just what I say. I'm afraid of the atmosphere. Mrs. R. has all the modern things in it just as much as you do. I don't want to live in it. I'm afraid of the atmosphere. If I stay where I am I will be with the people I love, and I think that I'll be happier in the end."

Don't you think the little school ma'am emphatically deserves the adjective I gave her the first time I do.

Contentment is one of the greatest factors of happiness. Indeed it is more than that; it is another name for it. There is nothing on earth so dangerous to contentment as being too much with people who have a great deal more of this world's goods than you.

People with different incomes have totally different standards. What one class regards as a luxury another considers a necessity. To get the standard of a store of discontent and unhappiness for yourself.

Of course some of your friends will have more than you. That is to be expected—just as some will have less than you. It is your own kind of people, let the backbone of your acquaintanceship be your own kind of people.

Bones Are Not Schillers and Are Removed From Princely Vault—Foolish Pride in German Navy

(Copyright, 1912, by the Hearst Wood Company)

An attraction in Weimer is the beautiful "Fuerstengruft," or mausoleum of the reigning grand ducal family, situated in a picturesque park in the suburbs of the city. Among its features of note are the tombs of the great German poets, Goethe and Schiller, whose remains were laid there as a posthumous tribute to their genius, by Grand-duke Charles Augustus in 1838. It has been recently ascertained, beyond the possibility of a doubt, that in the case of Schiller, who died in 1805, and whose supposed body was disinterred from its first resting place for removal to the princely vault, a mistake was made, and the bones of a stranger placed in the sarcophagus bearing the name of Schiller.

The mistake was made, and the bones of a stranger placed in the sarcophagus bearing the name of Schiller. The error was discovered by the grand-duke's physician, who, in consequence of the error, had the body of the stranger removed and placed in a vault of its own.

Daily Hints For the Cook

SPONGE CAKE.

Beat 3 eggs two minutes, add 1 1/2 cups of sugar, beat five minutes, 1 1/2 cup of flour and beat two minutes, 1 cup of water and beat one minute, then 1 cup of flour with a teaspoonful of baking powder and beat 1 minute, add a pinch of salt and a teaspoonful of lemon extract or any preferred flavor. Bake either as loaf or layer-cake in delicious layers with whipped cream between.

FROZEN PUDDING.

One quart of cream, 1 pint of milk, 1 1/2 cup of sugar, yolks of 8 eggs, 2 tablespoons of gelatine soaked in 1 1/2 a cup of milk. Make this into a custard, cooking in a double boiler, and when done, dissolve the gelatine in the boiling custard. Strain and add 2 tablespoons of wine and 2 table-spoons of sirup of brandied peaches. Cool and freeze and when hard pack in molds.

FRUIT SHERBERTS.

Red Raspberry Sherbert.—One box of red raspberries crushed and heated with a little water and the seeds strained out. 1 pint of water, 1 cup of sugar boiled together and the juice of 1 1/2 lemons. Freeze.

Pineapple Sherbert.—Three cups granulated sugar, 2 cups sweet milk, 3 cups cold water, 1 can of pineapple or 1 pine-apple peeled to shreds with a fork. Mix all together and freeze the same as for cream.

Grape Sherbert.—One quart of milk, 1 pound of sugar, 1 cup of grape juice, the juice of 1 lemon. Mix and freeze. Delicious.

How to Keep Face Young and Attractive

(National Hygienic Review).

The way to ward off old age is not to fear it, but to allow one's self to be oppressed by the dread of advancing years. The only legitimate preventative and avoid of wrinkles, sagging, and other signs of old age, is to keep the complexion young-looking and beautiful as to apply ordinary mercurized wax at bedtime, using it like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. This gradually absorbs the withered, faded cuticle, which is replaced by the more youthful, pink-tinted underlain. One ounce of this wax to be had at any drug store, is enough to completely rejuvenate a worn-out complexion.

Wrinkles and flabbiness of cheek and chin, the first signs of advancing age, may be lessened by simple, harmless preparation made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint which is used as a face paint.

solemnly entombed in the Stadtkirche. As to the remainder of the skeleton, it has disappeared entirely, so there is nothing to disagree about.

Professor Froese's selection has the largest following, especially in the city of Weimar and it is to be solemnly entombed in the Stadtkirche. As to the remainder of the skeleton, it has disappeared entirely, so there is nothing to disagree about.

As a parallel case to this I need only recall to my readers that the real skeleton of Christopher Columbus is now believed to rest in the Cathedral of San Domingo, the place of his original interment, in the West Indies, and not under the splendid tomb in the Cathedral of Spain, which, long after his death, a body supposed to be his was transferred.

Then there is the head of Haydn, which is said to have been taken from his body many years ago, when it was removed from the ossuary at Vienna to the mausoleum erected to his memory by Prince Nicholas Esterhazy at Eisenstadt, the skull of a stranger being substituted in its stead. The real one is on exhibition in the Imperial Music Society's Museum in the Austrian capital.

Finally there are the skulls of Oliver Cromwell and Richelieu, preserved respect-fully at Sevres, in France, and in the Sorbonne in Paris, whose genuineness has been the subject of endless controversy; and that of James V., of Scotland, who fell at Flodden Field and which, brought by Lord Dacre to London, lies enclosed in lead in the vaults of St. Thomas Church, in Wood street, within sound of the roar of Cheapside.

Questions of caste are beginning to play havoc with the personnel of Emperor William's navy. It is the old question that the navy department at Washington and the British admiralty have managed to treat more or less successfully to the status of the engineer officers of the fleet.

In spite of the efforts of the Kaiser and of the minister of marine, Admiral von Tirpitz, it has been found absolutely impossible to induce the regular naval men to treat the commissioned officers in charge of the engines as comrades or to have any kind of social intercourse with them. This is all the more strange, since the vast majority of the regular officers of the German navy belong to the bourgeoisie, and not to the aristocracy.

To make matters worse, the naval officers are encouraged in their attitude by most of the senior battleship captains and admirals. Thus, Vice Admiral Koepfer, who is the head of the naval station at Kiel, and inspector-general of the "Hildegard," the training schools of the navy—addressed not long ago an official communication to the director of the School of Marine Engineering, demanding that the pupils should abstain from all contact with the upper bourgeoisie, but from the lower ranks thereof, so that when they were officers they should abstain from all contact with the inferior social position justly accorded to them.

In another letter, Vice-Admiral Koepfer himself of bourgeois birth, writes to the same official intimating that the wives of officers should abstain from all attempts to call in a social way on the wives of the regular naval men, and cites the case of a naval officer who had come to him to inquire what course he should adopt with regard to an engineer officer and his wife who had just called at his house.

The admiral adds that he had instructed the officer in question to return the visit paid to his wife and to himself, but at the same time to intimate to the engineering officer that he did not desire any further social intercourse. He also in the same letter denounces the captain of a battleship who, while ashore at Kiel, had invited the chief engineer officer of his vessel to a purely family dinner, for which he was officially and seriously reprimanded.

This fostering of the bitter feeling between the two branches of the naval service, cannot but tend to impair the fighting strength of Emperor William's fleets in the event of war.

Want Wages Increased.

Halifax, N. S., July 12.—The union employees of the Halifax Electric Tramway Company at a meeting tonight decided to ask the government for a board of conciliation. They demand changed working conditions, and an advance in the wage schedule to 21 cents for the first year; 23 cents for the second, and 25 cents for the third, and 30 cents for more work. Time and a half is asked for all Sunday work and overtime.

It is a fortunate thing for the average man that his actions are less than one-half as fierce as his thoughts.
