

POETRY

SUMMER FRIENDS.

Summer birds! Summer birds!
Wither have ye flown?
I was your dear companion once,
And now ye leave me lone!
Beneath the wide boughs of the tree,
Before my father's door,
I used to sit all day to hear
The notes I hear no more!

Summer brooks! Summer brooks!
Whither do ye glide?
How pleasant was my grassy couch
You merry waves beside!
My life was like your current, then,
And smooth and swift it ran?
There is no type in summer brooks
Fow slow and thoughtful man.

Summer dells! Summer dells!
Oh, are ye still the same
As when of old to your retreats
In wayward mood I came?
The turf is still as soft and green,
As gently falls the shade;
And soft would be, though in the grave
This form were lowly laid.

Summer flowers! Summer flowers!
Where are the odors sweet,
Brought by the cool and wafting airs
That stole the summer best?
I never see your petals now
Wet with the early dew;
Alas! my fresh and morning hopes
Have faded, flowers, with you!

Summer friends! Summer friends!
The careless, light and gay:
Ye too, with fortune's sunny looks,
Liks birds, have flown away;
And like the brooks, and dells, and
flowers,
That I so loved to see,
Remain within your happy homes,
And never dream of me;

"GOOD NIGHT!"

"Hark! the vesper calls to prayer."—LA ROOKE
"When the sun has set in the Swiss valleys, and only the snowy summits of the mountains gleam with golden light,
the huntman who dwells on the highest habitable spot takes his horn, and pronounces audibly, 'Praise to the Lord God.' As soon as it is heard by the neighbouring huntmen, they issue from their huts and repeat the same words.—
All the huntmen then kneel and pray
with uncovered heads. 'Good night!'
sounds the highest hunter through his horn. 'Good night!' is echoed from below, and they retire to rest."

The parting beams of the orb of day
Have tinged the Alps with their golden ray;
And each lofty cliff is dazzling bright,
Where the frozen snow reflects the light.

Still is the scene: no thunder calls
The echo from those mountain walls;
No avalanche is resting near,
To fill the peasant's home with fear.

In the sky above there's not a cloud
The clear blue heaven to enshroud;
The shadow of each giant hill
Cests in the vales, so sweet and still!

The vesper bell, now sounding deep,
Warns the Swiss peasant to his sleep;
But each one first his song of praise
Will to the Great Creator raise.

The Alpine hunter raises his horn—
From rock to rock its echo is borne;
And all the gentle valleys ring
With praise to the Eternal King.

Each knee is then with reverence bent,
The silent prayer to Heaven is sent;
The offering of hearts imbued
With deepest sense of gratitude.

Ere darkness wraps the scene around,
Again the hunters' horns resound;
And with the last dim ray of light,
They shout the farewell words "Good Night!"

Wounds of animals may easily be cured, by the part affected being bathed frequently with the yolk of an egg, mixed in the spirit of turpentine of Florence.

There is a great deal of poetry
in the butter trade, as we learn from a Providence grocer, who advertises a lot "of a prepossessing colour, and sweet as morning
roses, newly washed with dew."

A gentleman has offered to build a wire bridge over the Mississippi,
at St. Louis, for 500,000 dols.
