LIKE OLD TIMES.

Many of Rev. William Williams Walker's Old Parishioners Hear His Three Sons Conduct Service.

The service at the Parish church at Hampton yesterday morning, was conducted by Rev. Millidge Walker, Rev. William Walker, and Rev. George Walker, sons of the late Rev. William Williams Walker, the former rector of the church. They were assisted by John W. Walker, son of Rev. Millidge Walker. The church was filled, among the congregation being many who had sat under the ministry of the old rector. In the opening part of his sermon the preacher, Rev. William Walker, referred to his father's long pastorate and their own early associations with the place, and the pleasure they all felt in renewing their acquaintance with it. Many of the congregation waited outside, and when the dergymen left the church they found themselves holding a reception on the church grounds. In the evening at the station church Revs. William and George Walker conducted service, the latter being the preacher.

"Gipsack" for July has reached this office brighter, better printed and more attractively illustrated than ever. This popular magazine's rest from publication evidently did it good.
