Ladies! Secret To Darken Gray Hair

Bring Back its Color and Lustre with Grandma's
Sage Tea Recipe.

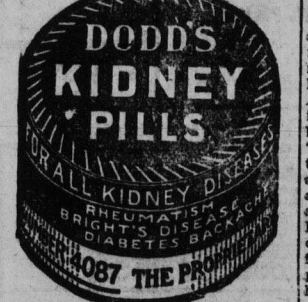

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While gray, faded hair is not ideal, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant, and you appear years younger.

IN THE EDITOR'S MAIL

To the Editor:
Sir—You will confer a favor if you will kindly publish the following in the interest of every taxpayer:
Previous to the last civic election I made the statement that I thought the people should come to the fountainhead for any information required for civic affairs, before criticizing too severely.

Might I say now that the estimates for 1921 are about all made up. There are at present laid on the table and I propose they shall be open for discussion by any association or organization or club—any letter writers, editors, or any individual taxpayer. The council will meet in committee on Monday at 11.30 a.m., and may continue in the afternoon, and I propose to ask them to offer Wednesday, from 11 o'clock forward, including an evening session for the benefit of any labor organization or workers who cannot get in through the day, so that all may have an opportunity of putting their views before the present council who will welcome any constructive criticism. After Wednesday it will be necessary for us to pass their mates, either as they are amended. I would especially welcome any interest for or against vocational training, that we may be enabled to decide on an application from the Vocational School Board. I will also be glad if you will allow me to state just here, that I was not correctly reported in the Times on Saturday last when they said "I stated I was opposed to technical training," because, on the other hand, I am very much in favor of it, but I said it should be a whole hearted effort, requiring a considerable outlay and hardly at the expense of the taxpayer. Already resolutions are beginning to come in to us and I think every member of the council would prefer that the various organizations should appear and ask for particulars before passing resolution for or against. I am writing this with the best intention so that the council may have the benefit of the taxpayers' view if they are not satisfied with our budget as now prepared, with a view to more co-operation and faith in one another.

Yours faithfully,
E. A. SCHOFIELD, Mayor.

a business founded in 1856, was arrested on a charge of unfair "sale" methods. For many days past the firm has been advertising a "Merchandise Adjustment Sale." The proprietor now is charged with violating the fraudulent advertising act of May, 1916. The "Better Business Bureau" at Washington, which instigated the prosecution, alleges goods were offered at the sale at prices higher than their value instead of at cut prices, as advertised. It is further charged the Stinebaughs, a big Berlin metal plant which looked out its workers for attempting to follow the Communist suggestion to take charge of the factory and run it on full time is also significant.

GERMANS TURN EYES TOWARD HOHENZOLLERNS

GREATER EMPIRE UNDER THE KAISER

Is the Rallying Cry of the Monarchists at Celebration of Semi-Centennial.

By S. B. CONGER.
(Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger.)
Berlin, Jan. 23.—Celebration of the semi-centennial of the proclamation of the German empire at Versailles, January 18, is developing steadily, as the German Republicans feared, into a glorification of the old order and the Hohenzollerns, and a demonstration in favor of re-establishing the monarchy when the proper time arrives.

The creation of a greater Germany extending far beyond the 1918 frontiers, re-establishment of a united empire under a Hohenzollern kaiser and turning the clock back from the socialist experiments of today to the glorious leadership of kings and junkers were demands voiced at meetings held yesterday. Many demonstrations throughout Germany were staged yesterday, since the federal government refrained from making the actual anniversary, Tuesday, a national holiday, fearing collisions between monarchists and radicals.

The dominant note at virtually all of these meetings, according to reports so far received, was strongly nationalistic and chauvinistic. The proud days under the Bismarckian empire were contrasted with the humble position of the German republic. The collapse under the monarchistic regime being conveniently ignored.

Old Idea Revived.

The Pan-German idea of a greater Germany embracing all the German-speaking populations of Europe was dragged from the obscurity in which it has rested for some time by an orator at a Berlin meeting of monarchist officers and soldiers, who declared the day was dawning for the Germans to establish a great national state which could only be an empire and its ruler a Hohenzollern kaiser. The speaker and many professors of the Berlin State University listened with approval at a meeting of the league of German students to praise of the monarchy and declarations of the greatness and its kings and nobility, who are the natural leaders of the people.

A member of the Reichstag, Prof. Kabe, who draws double pay from the republic for faculty and parliamentary work, preached to a great crowd at Munich that Germany's will for an empire and a kaiser must again be awakened, as formerly by Bismarck. It is small wonder that with these motives in the overtone Socialist orators generally have served notice the word that children should skip school tomorrow, when demonstrations will be held in all the schools.

Celebration Forbidden.

Two sections of Germany will not celebrate openly tomorrow, East Prussia, where radicals have served notice they would break up any demonstration forcibly, and the occupied areas, where the French saw no reason for recalling events of fifty years ago. A secured prohibition for the entire occupied area. German authorities in several sections of central Germany, where a violent reaction is strong and tumultuous, also placed prohibition of the anniversary under the ban, fearing disorders.

On the whole, however, the demonstration in favor of the lost glories of the past promises far greater impressiveness than rival manifestations in favor of the Communist state of the future, which Communist and Radicals staged on the occasion of the second anniversary of the killing of Karl Liebknecht, Saturday. The turn out was comparatively small in view of the number of adherents which they claimed throughout the country, and the warning given by Communist leaders to refrain from conflicts with the police or any disturbances from order, showed the leaders far less confident of the strength of their position than a year ago. Their failure to take up the challenge thrown down by the Communist state of the future, showed the leaders far less confident of the strength of their position than a year ago. Their failure to take up the challenge thrown down by the Communist state of the future, showed the leaders far less confident of the strength of their position than a year ago.

Play Waiting Game.

The formation of an out-and-out Prussian Royalist party, which was due to a realization that the regular conservative party, although at heart monarchistic, is committed to this cautious policy. The new party embraces only a few fanatics.

Vocational School Asks $25,000 Grant

Question Will Not Be Decided
Until Opponents of Scheme
Have Innings.

The city council listened to the arguments of vocational training who appeared and urged the grant of $25,000 for that purpose at the meeting on Saturday. After hearing the declaration Mayor Schofield announced that before any action was taken there would be an opportunity given for any who might be disposed to object to come before the council and place their view of the matter before the commissioners.

Those present to support the grant to vocational training were Dr. Emery, Mrs. W. B. Raymond, Thomas Nagle, Alexander Wilson, W. K. Ganong, A. H. Wetmore, Dr. Brink, A. G. Leavitt, Fletcher Peacock and Major Lawson.

Major Lawson outlined the aims of the vocational board, which were to provide day schools for the boys and girls who did not take the regular present High School course and give them a commercial or mechanical training and to provide night schools for those who had already left school, but wanted more education. He took up the estimates and gave his opinion that no cut could be made if a service in any measure efficient was given.

Mrs. W. E. Raymond spoke for the home-making classes and contended that these had been a great success last year. She claimed there should be no class distinctions introduced, and all who come should be given the benefit of the training provided, as it meant better and happier homes where the woman knew how to make a home.

W. K. Ganong and A. H. Wetmore, while recognizing the need for vocational training, thought for economy at the present time, thought the money spent in this way could hardly be called extravagance.

Which Plan Is Best?

Commissioner Frink wanted to know whether they thought it would be better to spend $25,000 on vocational training or use it to provide work for some of the jobless. They thought both might be accomplished.

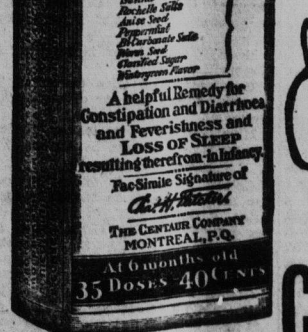

Fletcher Peacock, provincial director, gave a short address on what was being done in other places and claimed St. John was away behind the times in this branch of education. Mayor Schofield stated that before any action was taken by the Council the taxpayers would be given an opportunity to express themselves on the matter, for it meant adding six or eight cents to their tax rate. Personally he was inclined to think some of this work should be done by the industrial concerns themselves.

MORE RECRUITS ARE EXPECTED

Intend to Put Payment of Campaign Debts by Diplomatic Posts up to Harding.

By CARL W. ACKERMAN.
(Copyright, 1921, by Public Ledger.)
London, Jan. 23.—There is every indication today that at least four United States ministers will not resign March 4 and that President Harding will be compelled to decide almost immediately after he takes office whether he will use foreign diplomatic posts to repay campaign debts or keep in office ministers who were appointed from the diplomatic and consular service. The men in Europe are Hugh Gibson, American minister to Poland; Joseph Clark Grew, minister to Denmark; William Phillips, formerly assistant secretary of state and now minister to Holland; Evan E. Young, high commissioner to the Baltic states, and Hampton Gary, minister to Switzerland.

All Risen From Ranks.

All of these men have worked their way up in the United States foreign service, starting in minor positions in Washington and covering years of service as secretaries and counselors of legations and embassies. They are the representatives of the young men in the consular and diplomatic service out of American domestic politics. All of these men hold responsible positions today as a reward for service in children under the age of 18 believe if they should resign March 4 the movement to remove the foreign service from the influence of political parties would be given a setback of a decade.

The Public Ledger's Berlin correspondent already has reported that members of the American commission to Germany would not resign. Grant Smith, high commissioner to Hungary, will also in all probability adopt the same course.

Daniels' Statement Denied In London

Great Britain Has About 250
Destroyers—Less Than United States.

London, Jan. 23.—The recent statement of Mr. Daniels, American Secretary of the Navy, comparing the light fleet strength of the British and American navies, has caused considerable comment here. The admiralty declares that instead of having 334 destroyers, as Mr. Daniels stated, Great Britain really has about 250, or less than the United States, and is disposing of more to be broken up. Aside from three or four destroyers sold to Chile some time ago, the destroyers are being broken up either by the government or by purchasers who take them over with the understanding that they are to be broken up. It is stated at the Admiralty that this is not any part of the navy reduction scheme, but simply business. The number of destroyers in China is out of all proportion to the fleet owing to the rapid building for submarine chasing. Should Great Britain adopt a formidable capital ship programme most of the destroyers now being broken up would be obsolete by the time the new ships were launched, hence Great Britain is riding herself of these useless craft and keeping the latest type destroyers. The Admiralty says the same conditions apply to submarines.
