The unveiling of the monument to Sir Leonard Tilley, work on the King square site of which is now being done, is to be made a very imposing ceremony, according to the plans of the committee in charge. It is expected to have the Governor-General, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, or some man of public prominence nearly equal, to do the unveiling.

The firm which is laying the foundation is to have it ready for the figure in August, and the unveiling will take place during the dominion exposition. The sculpture is now being cast in Paris.

Shiloh's Cure quickly stops coughs, cures colds, heals the throat and lungs. . . . 25 cents.

Mr. Geoffrion, chairman of the Lumsden committee, maintained that the Conservative members had no justification for their conduct, declaring that, throughout, the majority had acted fairly and with no other object than to get at all the facts bearing upon Mr. Lumsden's charges.

Mr. Crothers argued that in the public interest the Conservative majority should have been allowed to nominate counsel. E. M. MacDonald.

E. M. MacDonald challenged any member of the majority to name any precedent for the course taken by Messrs. Lumsden, Crothers and Barker. These gentlemen stood in the position of members who had declined to perform the duties which had been dictated to them by parliament, and he suggested that their reason for retiring was not what they had submitted, but they desired to crawl out of an uncomfortable position, and hoped to make good campaign material with the aid of ex parte statements.

The opposition might as well claim to have the right to dictate the policy of the government as to contend that they should override the majority appointed to the Lumsden committee, or any other majority.

Mr. MacDonald showed from the record of committee's proceedings that the Liberal majority had acceded to the proposition to conduct the investigation, that they asked the Conservative members to name counsel who would be acceptable to the committee as a whole, and that the minority took the position, for which there was no precedent in parliamentary or committee practice, that they alone should appoint counsel.

Messrs. Meighen and Lancaster continued the debate along the well beaten opposition lines, and then at 10 o'clock the flow of talk suddenly dried up, Mr. Lumsden withdrawing his motion, and the house got back to real business.

The resolution respecting militia pensions and that to increase the military college salary votes were adopted, and bills based on them put through.

The house adjourned at 11 p. m.

Then he moved to Ontario, married, and became a minister of the Church of England, labored for some years in Michigan, and finally returned to the Miramichi, where he labored for some years. He was a man of high character, and became rector of Newcastle. He retired from his charge and returned to England, but the Miramichi spell was on him, and he gladly accepted the rectorship of Derby and came back to us. Young, all of St. Stephen, and Miss Gertrude A. Young, of this city.

COULDN'T RUN THE COMMITTEE (Continued from page 1.) Mr. Geoffrion, chairman of the Lumsden committee, maintained that the Conservative members had no justification for their conduct, declaring that, throughout, the majority had acted fairly and with no other object than to get at all the facts bearing upon Mr. Lumsden's charges.

Mr. Crothers argued that in the public interest the Conservative majority should have been allowed to nominate counsel. E. M. MacDonald.

E. M. MacDonald challenged any member of the majority to name any precedent for the course taken by Messrs. Lumsden, Crothers and Barker. These gentlemen stood in the position of members who had declined to perform the duties which had been dictated to them by parliament, and he suggested that their reason for retiring was not what they had submitted, but they desired to crawl out of an uncomfortable position, and hoped to make good campaign material with the aid of ex parte statements.

The opposition might as well claim to have the right to dictate the policy of the government as to contend that they should override the majority appointed to the Lumsden committee, or any other majority.

Mr. MacDonald showed from the record of committee's proceedings that the Liberal majority had acceded to the proposition to conduct the investigation, that they asked the Conservative members to name counsel who would be acceptable to the committee as a whole, and that the minority took the position, for which there was no precedent in parliamentary or committee practice, that they alone should appoint counsel.

Messrs. Meighen and Lancaster continued the debate along the well beaten opposition lines, and then at 10 o'clock the flow of talk suddenly dried up, Mr. Lumsden withdrawing his motion, and the house got back to real business.

The resolution respecting militia pensions and that to increase the military college salary votes were adopted, and bills based on them put through.

WILL ENCOURAGE USE OF ENGLISH CORN FOR FEEDING

St. John Agricultural Society Held Important Meeting Yesterday—An Interesting Book. Friday, April 1. A meeting of the St. John Agricultural Society was held yesterday afternoon. After the routine business was transacted it was decided to order a large quantity of oat, timothy, clover and turnip seeds. It was also decided that the society should try to induce the farmers of the county to use English corn for feeding purposes. An interesting paper was read by Dr. Johnson on breeding utility animals to a type. In his paper, Dr. Johnson said that in discussing this topic, two distinctly different classes of breeding must be recognized, first the one whose object is immediate profit without much reference to breed improvements; the other, the artist in the business who is interested above all, in improving the breed. Dr. Johnson's paper contained some instructive matter, and was listened to with great interest by all present. Councillor Donovan read a rather lengthy report of the proceedings of the Farmers' and Agriculturists' Association convention at Fredericton. The secretary, R. P. Patchell, who attended the Fruit Growers' Association at Fredericton, read his report, dealing chiefly with the growing of fruit trees and strawberries. Secretary James Cocher, of Carleton, John Kerr, Dr. Cook, Dr. Bayard, Alexander Wedderburn, Peter Dewar, M. H. Perley, John Gillies, W. Ritchie, T. L. Nicholson, Thomas Trafton, James W. Peters, Isaac Clark, Richard Calvert, James Travis, George Brown, Thomas Bean, George Bell.
