Cobb is Valuable

Baseball sharps figure that the oss of Ty Cobb not only would result in disaster for the Detroit club but also would greatly reduce the patronage of the Tigers in other American league cities. Cobb has been a powerful attraction for many years. He draws $20,000 in salary, but is worth every dollar of

How much money does the Georgia Peach draw at the gate during a championship season? n is hard to answer, but several estimates have been made that are interesting. The Tigers are sche-duled to play seventy-seven games away from home each year. If Cobb attracts an increase of 3,500 fans over the average daily attendance figures on a basis of 60 cents a head it is figured that his appearance on the field nets $1,500 per game. At that rate Cobb, on the road, is third, or nearly $40,000. In seventy-seven games at home, baseball experts figure that Cobb's attractiveness is three times as great, or about $120,000. Summing up, therefore, Cobb may be worth at least $150,000 up the Detroit club and possibly more, when it is taken into consideration how large the crowds are in Chicago, New York.
