One Type of Fever That Characterizes Modern Summer Girls. One fact stands out in startling fashon in our modern world in general and the summer resort in particular, and that is the decay of friendship. It is indeed a portentons sign of the stove in the corner grocery store. "Ever thnes, for only by sincere attachments and unflinching loyalty can a society one of them. be held together which is worthy of the name. Yet the tendency nowadays is to make happy-go-lucky "friendships" everywhere, to call people by their Christian names before you know acquaintances after a ten weeks' trial with less regret than one would discard an old shoe. For a month or two the fever takes its course. Everything that the new paragou does is perfect. The protagonists in the little comedy exhibit exaggerated joy in each other's society. Then, presto, there is a little rift within the lute. "Somebody" has "said something," or the real perfidiousness of the brand new triend has. been discovered.
