BRANTFORD, Oct. 25.-The trial of Maria BRANTFORD, Oct. 25.—The tria of antial Hartley for the murder of her husband, Caleb Hartley by poisoning at New Dur-ham on Sunday, May 13, 1894, commenced yesterday before His Honor, Mr. Justice MacMahon. The case promises to be a

Mrs. Sarah Allen, wife of William Allen, New Durham, was the first witness. She said: "I have known Mr. and Mrs. Hartley and Fred Hartley were at my place for dinner on Christmas. Mrs. Hartley said if Caleb was out of the way she would marry Ling. She began the conversation. By talking about Ling, and I asked her what she wanted to do with Ling when she had a good husband and a grown family. She said tip to see goods in: Light from the north, light from the east, light from the south.

She said she could keep him and would use him well. She frequently said she did not like her husband, and said that some years ago. I did not see her again from Christmas until after her husband's death. I know Ling by sight and I saw him between Christmas and the time of Mr. Hartley's death. I have never seen Ling and the prisoner together on the road.

Daniel Quigg, shoemaker, of New Durham, deposed: "I can't exactly answer the question as to the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Hartley, but at certain times

The cross-examination had not gone far when it became apparent she was again in a fainting condition. Mr. Osler then said he would release her from further cross-examination. Frank Allan said he saw Caleb Hartley on the Wednesday before he died. He had bloodshot eyes and looked bad. He said to witness he felt ill. Next day he appeared worse and complained of pains in his stomach and vomiting. He got gradually worse and died on the Sunday. Mrs. Harley did not seem to think the case a serious one.

Frank Allan, New Durham, said he knew Caleb Hartley. He saw him on May 3rd near the cheesefactory. He was going to the doctors. His face was flushed and eyes were bloodshot. He told him he had vomited five or six times that day. "I beard near Hartley's and called often to Orillia public school on Wednesday, 34th

I told Mr. Best, the Baptist minister in New Durham, that I was induced to go to her house by Mrs. Hartley.

I don't remember asking Bishop what they were going to do about this thing. I will not swear that on that occasion I did or did not say "——you Maria. If you can't tell what is straight I will."

I can't say how often improper intimacy took place between the prisoner and myself, but 4k was as often as I went to her house. Such relations existed over a period of nine months, the last eccasion being about three weeks before Hartley's death.

Wm. Allan, constable, went to Hartley's next day after deceased returned from all, Hamilton. Mrs. Hartley told him Caleb had gone to Hamilton, and she did not expect him to come home alive as he had heart trouble. While he was there Ling made Caleb an egg nog, putting in some unknown mixture. The following Sunday he found Caleb very bad. He was bleeding at the nose, which continued till he died. Friday I told Mrs. Hartley the doctor wanted me to stay with Caleb. When Ling was out Mrs. Hartley the When Ling was out Mrs. Hartley started talking about Ling. Ling came in suddenly at the expression when Ling put his arms around her and hugged and kissed her which quieted her ruffied feelings. When caleb was dead Mrs. Hartley went into the form and looking on the face of her dead husband said, 'Mrs, I believe some one has given him a dose.' After I left the stomach in Toronto for the analysts Mrs. Hartley then enquired how they would find out if there was poison in it. I replied that I did not know and said if she did it she would know, and if Ling did it he would know. She then said, 'If you don't tell on Henry I will give you anything in the store.' The evidence for the Crown is all in. The case will probably occupy a portion of next week.

Husband at London.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 26.—A pleasant-looking woman of medium height is in town in search of her husband who, she claims, has descrited her. She has with her two children. Her story is that she came from Cleveland, Ohio, that her faithless spouse long ago ceased to contribute to her support and that for six weeks has eluded her. Hearing that he was at London she came here, but found he had left and was supposed to be in Woodstock. She gives her mane as Sclaw. Her husband was in the city last week canvassing the town with a line of note paper. etc. The indignant wife tells a pitiful story of her neglect, and charges her husband with dividing his affections with a London girl.

CONFESSED HIS GUILT

Almeda Chattelle Admits He is the Murderer of Jessie Kieth is now in Stratford jail awaiting trial at the spring assizes. His name is a Almeda Chattelle. He is a tramp and was arrested at Cataract.

The all-important black valise and its contents, the white petticoat wrapped about the throat of the murdered girl, the parcel dropped by Chattelle when first arrested, the woman's garments found on his person, the brush and comb, were all identified by Mrs. MacLeod, of Alisa Craig, as her property.

After this and something like a sixth act to the tragedy was the production of the parcel dropped by Chattelle on the railroad track near Erin. The black cashmere basque that it contained, the black brush and brown horn comb were all claimed by Mrs. MacLeod. The girl's black stockings in the valise were not hers. Mrs. MacLeod also identified a walking-stick shown her as one discovered near her house after the theft of the satchel. The house she said had been entered through a cellar window, evidently broken by a stick.

The visit to the jail still further riveted the chain about Chattelle. Angus McLean recognized him as the suspicious tramp who was basking in the sunshine; Gordon McEwan added his weighty recognition. Robert Morris, of Listowel, saw the prisoner near Britton at 10.45 a.m. on Friday. Atthat time he carried a valise. When he

At 10.15 a hack was in waiting at the jail door and a restless mob was clamoring outside for the prisoner. A number of the constables were on hand and the prisoner was suddenly rushed through and into the hack. A large rock followed in dangerous proximity and narrowly escaped hitting persons in the crowd. He was driven off at full speed to the station, followed by a turbulent crowd. At the station the train was not yet in and the prisoner was taken into the depot, where he remained closely suarded until its arrival.

The crowd here was very demonstrative and seemed dangerous. All sorts of cries and threats were made, such as "Lynch him," "Use the rope," "Throw him under the train," etc., The officers ran him down the platform, followed by the crowd, and at the car steps a determined effort was made to get him. There was no organized leader, but a few men the worse of liquor called for volunteers to follow them into the car and take him. In the scramble Constable McCarthy, of Stateford, narrowly escaped falling under the car, For ten minutes the train remain.

AWAY FROM HOME FOR YEARS

Chattelle told his friends when he was in St. Hyacinthe in September last that he never had time to make the trip from Montreal or Quehec back to St. Hyacinthe. He deserted from a ship when in New York and made his way across the continent and it was then that he fell in with the James boys.
