Did you ever notice how few people there are present when any one happens to say nice things about you? Married men as a rule do not live in the future, but their wives persist in asking them everything.

A Wise Request.

Recently in London, the Lord Mayor, addressing a public meeting on some of the many questions that come under the head of National Service, spoke of the duty owed to the young soldier particularly. He asked that private homes be opened for their use, homes where these boys might learn something of the better side of life than is possible in barracks or in training camps; be ragged, that good band concerts, proper amusements, opportunities to see a little more of life nearer to that from which many of the soldiers had to come, to obtain good books, in a word the Lord Mayor asked that these boys should not be allowed to develop idle, useless habits while in the service of the country. The Lord Mayor recognized a very serious menace to the young manhood of the Empire, and his attempt to better the condition of the military service as regards the leisure of the young soldier should be widely supported. Thousands of students have left the colleges with their education incomplete; men who were just at the bottom of a professional career have given up most willingly every prospect of attainment, and cheerfully accepted all sorts of discomfort that they might serve in the vast army of the allied nations. The physical discomfort is the smallest part of the matter, although there is more than a word to be said regarding the breaking of a soldier in training because of a lack of proper housing facilities, decent food, or proper medical attendance. These things, however, are not the things the Lord Mayor had in mind, but rather the danger of mental dissolution because of insufficient attention. It is a very serious matter, for a little opportunity for proper recreation, for a little study, for something that will raise the daily life above the level of mere physical existence, is due to these young soldiers of to-day who, if all probability, will be the citizens of to-morrow. If they are to return to the homes they have left less vigorous in body those scars will be honorable; if to the less able body is added a mental inability because of the idle habits acquired while in training, the latter will be the more serious.

It is not the fear of death that chills the heart of many a mother when a boy still in his teens begins to talk of enlisting. Death is more merciful than other evils, and the thought of months of unoccupied leisure in the training camps and their effect upon the susceptible boy has made many a loyal woman false to her ideals. Older men recognize this deteriorating influence, and about the recruiting stations is heard over and over again the statement that 'this unit will go at once'; very often circumstances arise to prevent this speedy journey overseas, but the point is that the weariness and inertia of the training camps is well known and is, too, realized as a deterrent factor in recruiting.

The present war has changed the whole situation; never in the history of the world has such a huge volunteer force gone into action. Those methods that were adequate under normal conditions are of little or no value in the situation as it is to-day. The civilized world has in a sense become one vast military camp, and the demands for its proper maintenance are unending. Every effort has been made to keep the men on the firing lines well and contented. The Y. M. C. A. and other organizations have literally carried a breath of home to the very trenches. And the same organization, as well as the churches, have opened their doors freely to the men at home and in training camps, but evidently there is still an opportunity for improvement. Here in Canada, where the military have a considerable chance to make their own traditions, and where a great opportunity makes all sorts of out-of-door recreation possible, the officers should not find much difficulty in establishing athletics. The generous response of the people when asked for assistance can, too, always be counted upon, so that as far as Canada is concerned the request of the Lord Mayor which, apparently in its necessity is empire wide, need not be disregarded.

Rod and Gun for April is on the news-stands and its table of contents reveals much of interest to the devotee of rod and gun. Bonnycastle Dale writes in this issue of 'Laddie the Boy Trapper'; A. H. Haines contributes a story 'The Big Duck of Bald Knolls,' descriptive of a deer hunt under unusual circumstances in B. C.; and there are other tales of hunting, fishing and canoeing equally interesting to the lover of the out-of-doors.

'Fishing Notes,' edited by Robert Page Lincoln, is replete with up-to-date articles for the disciple of the immortal Isaac while such well-known writers as Townsend Whelen and Chas. Askes contribute splendid articles to the Guns and Ammunition department of this issue. W. J. Taylor, Ltd., Woodstock, Ont., is the publisher.

Silent Bidders.

There are many methods in auction rooms whereby well known bidders signify to the auctioneer their intention of increasing the last bid made without any verbal notification. One of these methods, which is very generally used, is to place a card on the table in front of the bidder, which is a card with the name of the bidder written on it.

It is a fact that one of the richest buyers in a certain western auction room estimates that he has reached his limit by the polishing of his eyes, while yet another, adopting the most nonchalant attitude, as if he were really not bidding at all, but casually examining the goods as they come forward, gives the signal by the opening and snapping of his case of his gold hunting watch, as if he were just glancing at the time.

Of course the auctioneer knows the idiosyncrasies of his various customers, and therefore accepts the bid and calls it out, while the general body assembled there are utterly at a loss to know who has made the last advance.

Don't Be Dyspeptic.

The dyspeptic has thought only of the stomach when the real source of trouble is the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse and purify the digestive and excretory system and in this way put the organs of digestion into splendid working condition. A little patient urging on these organs when sluggish will restore the habit of healthful digestion.

A Centenarian.

David Kenney, aged nearly 102 years, has left his home in Dartmouth to go on a fishing trip to Sheet Harbour, where a number of his sons reside. Mr. Kenney lived in the times when Napoleon was endeavoring to conquer the world and says, 'Not only do I expect to live to see the complete overthrow of the Kaiser, but if the recruiting officers would take me on I'd like to go over and help to thrash the Hunns to a finish.'

Mr. Kenney was born in Barrington and was the son of a captain. He has five daughters and four sons living. Of his sixty-seven grandchildren, seven are fighting in Europe.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited, Gentlemen,—I had my leg badly hurt, the pain was very severe and a large swelling came above the knee. I expected it would be serious—I rubbed it with MINARD'S LINIMENT, which stopped the pain and reduced the swelling very quickly. I cannot speak too highly of MINARD'S LINIMENT.

AMC'S T. SMITH.

Port Head Island.

Two fishermen were among a class that was being drilled in marching tactics. One was new at the business, and, turning to his companion, asked him the meaning of the command 'halt.' 'Why,' said Mike, 'when he says that, you just bring the foot that's on the ground to the side and the foot that's in the air, and remain motionless.'

German Mind Terribly Warped.

That the German mind has been terribly warped, that it seems utterly incapable of distinguishing right from wrong, is evidenced by a most striking illustration afforded by a letter written by a young German woman, daughter of a Government architect, to a young lady friend in Switzerland. The translation recently appeared in a Swiss newspaper: 'My dear little Louise,—The contents of your last letter would have wounded me if I had not known that your opinions on our glorious war were the outcome of ignorance. You live in a country which is effeminized by the influence of old-fashioned ideas of liberty, which are now centuries behind us. You require a strong dose of Prussian culture. It is evident that you, a Swissess, fashioned to French thought, cannot understand that my young German girl's heart has ardently, passionately desired this war; it has been talked of with us for years, and my father used to say to us children, 'Germany is becoming too small for us; we must turn to France in order to make a place for ourselves and to get money.'

'Is it our fault if France does not understand that we need money and territory? Then you reproach me for the treatment of our soldiers towards the Belgian 'canaille'; you also speak of the damage to the Rheims Cathedral, of villages and towns burnt, etc., etc. That is war!

'You have something to learn in order to equal us and I can assure you that all that has been done up to now is a mere bagatelle to what is going to happen. There is only one country worthy to dominate the whole world, which has attained a high degree of civilization, and that is—Prussia. I say Prussia, for if as G. Mann we are overlords of the world, the Prussian is par excellence the overlord of the Germans. All other nations are degenerate, and of inferior value. Only yesterday our pastor was explaining in a convincing manner that the first man and woman, Adam and Eve, were also Prussians. That is easy to understand, for in the beginning God created man according to his own image, if, therefore, all men have descended from a Prussian, Adam, and from his wife, there should only exist Prussians—or at least Germans—and everything that grows and exists should belong to us. You must admit that is logical reasoning, and that is why our device is 'God with us and Germany over all.' You will understand now why we wanted this war.

'It is not shameful that other people who have no right to exist on this earth should wish to reduce our inheritance! We are the divine fruit and all others are but weeds. That is why our great Emperor, representing God on earth, has decided to put an end to all these injustices, and to exterminate the weeds. Now, do you understand? 'With a handshake 'a la Prussienne.'

I remain, etc. —'

If this is the way German women talk and think, then it is no wonder that the German soldier has behaved as murderous and licentious beasts in all the territories which they have overrun. The race stands on a moral plane lower than that of the Zulus, and this fact itself is sufficient reason for the rest of Europe to wage ceaseless and relentless war until such a nation lies prostrate in the dust.

Flag Funerals.

Britain is the only country which allows its historical flags to go into the pawnshop or auction room. One such flag, after having waved over 300 ft. for three years during the siege of Gibraltar, was actually found covering the sofa cushions of a tradesman's sitting room!

In 1886 the 1st Battalion, Gloucester Regiment, recovered from a pawnshop at York town flag, which had borne from 1795 to 1870 through the Egyptian and Peninsular campaigns. There may be seen in the Kendal Parish Church a pair of the old colors of the 2nd Battalion Border Regiment. They were rescued in 1888 by Lord Archibald Campbell from a London upholsterer, who had advertised them for sale as though they were window curtains.

To prevent old colors meeting with such fates many have been cremated with great ceremony, and the ashes preserved carefully in a box. Others have been buried with full military honors, among them being sets belonging to the King's Own Scottish Borderers and the 2nd Battalion Worcester Regiment.

Oleomargarine.

The atrocious prices of butter is bound to force the Government to remove the prohibition on the importation of Oleomargarine. One thing is certain, and that is that those who are opposed to the repeal of this law must give up their stupid misrepresentation of the article in question. Years ago, when the making of Oleomargarine was more for the purpose of utilizing waste and rancid beef fats than of supplying a real article of food, logical and just objections do not hold good at the present time. The product being now a perfectly unobjectionable article of food. At first, Oleomargarine was made from beef tallow and was not as palatable as it is to-day, its present constituents being Oleo oil, lard, cotton seed oil, various other vegetable oils, butter, milk or cream, casein, water and salt. All these are perfectly edible and easily digestible. Oleo oil is extracted from sweet, neutral oil from leaf lard.

High grade Oleomargarine generally contains Oleo oil 88 per cent, lard 37, butter, 26, cotton oil being used where no butter is put into the mixture. It must be remembered that this article is extensively used in England, where it has to pass through strict tests before being permitted to be sold.

Magicians of the Pen.

While W. W. Jacobs confesses that he often sits, pen in hand, a whole morning without putting a solitary word on paper, Sir Arthur Conan Doyle has written a story of 12,000 words without once leaving his desk. Even such a painstaking writer as the late R. L. Stevenson had his spasms of lightning work, in one of which he completed his famous 'Jekyll and Hyde' story within seven days and H. L. Calne wrote the first and last lines of his 'Life of Lord Byron' in three weeks. While Sir J. M. Barrie counts five or six hundred words a 'good day's work,' H. G. Wells has often written 10,000 words between breakfast and bed, and Mrs. L. T. Meade has produced 30,000 words in a busy day.

The late Andrew Lang, when in the mood, has more than once written 5,000 of a book between breakfast and a late luncheon, and it is said that S. R. Crockett wrote the last half of 'The Stickler Minister' in forty hours.

But all these feats of rapid authorship, marvellous as they are, were quite eclipsed by the elder Dumas, who, in one phenomenal year, actually turned out volumes at the rate of one a week.

Sydney has celebrated the entry of the United States into the war. The demonstration, in which thousands of citizens took part, started with a torchlight procession, headed by hands and carrying the flag of the Allies, accompanied among which was the Stars and Stripes. The procession was followed by a grand display of fireworks. After which an open air meeting was held, which was addressed by the Mayor and others. A number of Americans took part in the demonstration.

Heart's Action Was Weak And Circulation Poor

He Was Always Tired and Nervous and Had Pains in Feet and Legs—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Cured.

The heart is a wonderful worker, sending every year in and year out, forever pumping the blood through the body. If the heart is weak, the blood is poor, and the body suffers. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is a powerful tonic, and it is the only medicine that can cure a weak heart. It is made of the most powerful nerve tonic, and it is the only medicine that can cure a weak heart. It is made of the most powerful nerve tonic, and it is the only medicine that can cure a weak heart.
