VOLUME II. FREDERICTON, JANUARY 22, 1880. NO. 104.

IVANHOE.
(BY SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.)

"Whatever becomes of him," said Prince John, "no is vic or of the day; and were he tenfold our enemy, or the devoted friend of our brother, which is perhaps the same, his wounds must be looked to—our own physician shall attend him."

A stern smile curled the Prince's lip as he spoke. Waldemar Fitzurse hastened to reply, that Ivanhoe was already removed from the lists, and in the custody of his friends.
"I was somewhat afflicted," he said, "to see the grief of the Queen of Love and Beauty, to whose sovereignty of a day this event has changed into mourning. I am not a man to be moved by a woman's lament for her lover; but this same Lady Rowena suppressed her sorrow with such dignity of manner, that it could only be discovered by her folded hands and tearless eye, which trembled at a moment on the lipless look before her."

"Who is this Lady Rowena," said Prince John "of whom we have heard so much?"
"A Saxon heiress of large possessions," replied the Prior Aysler; "a rose of loveliness, and a jewel of wealth; the fairest among a thousand, and a bundle of money, in a cluster of camphire."
"We shall cheer her sorrows," said Prince John, "and when her lord, by wedding her to a Norman, she seems a minor, and must therefore be at our royal disposal in marriage. How sweet to me De Bracy? What thinkst thou of gaining fair lands and livings, by wedding a Saxon, after the fashion of the followers of the Conqueror?"
"It the lands are to my liking, my only answer to De Bracy, it will be hard to displease me with a bride; and deeply will I hold myself bound to your highness for a good deed, which will fulfil all promises made in favor of your servant and vassal."
"We will not forget it," said Prince John, "and that we may instantly go to work, and our senseschal presently to order the attendance of the Lady Rowena and her company—that is, the rude churl her guardian, and the Saxon ox struck down in the tournament, upon this evening's banquet. De Bracy," he added to our second summons, so courteously as to gratify the pride of these Saxons, and make it impossible for them again to refuse; although, by the bones of Becket, courtesy to him is costing pearls before swine."
Prince John had proceeded thus far, and was about to give the signal for retiring from the lists, when a small billet was put into his hand.

"From whence?" said Prince John, looking at the person by whom it was delivered.
"From foreign parts, my lord, but from whence, I know not," replied his attendant. "A Frenchman brought it hither, who said he had ridden night and day to put it into the hands of your highness."
John then opened the billet with apparent agitation which visibly and greatly increased when he had perused the contents, which were expressed in these words:
"Take heed to yourself, for the Devil is uncleaned!"
The Prince turned as pale as death, looked first on the earth, and then to heaven, like a man who has received news that sentence of execution has been passed upon him. Recovering from the first effects of his surprise, he took Waldemar Fitzurse and De Bracy aside, and put the billet into their hands successively. "It means, he added, in a faltering voice, "that my brother Richard has obtained his freedom."

"This may be a false alarm, or a forged letter," said De Bracy.
"It is France's own hand and seal," replied Prince John.
"It is time, then," said Fitzurse, "to draw our party to a head, either at York, or some other central place. A few days later, and it will be indeed too late. Your highness must break short this present mummy."
"The women and commons," said De Bracy, "must not be dismissed discontented; for lack of their share in the sports."
"The day," said Waldemar, "is not yet very far spent—let the archers shoot a few rounds at the target, and the prize be adjudged. This will be an abundant fulfilment of the Prince's promises, so far as this herd of Saxon serfs is concerned."

"I thank thee, Waldemar," said the Prince; "thou remindest me, too, that I have a debt to pay to that insolent peasant who yesterday insulted our person. Our banquet also shall go forward to-night as we proposed. Were this my last hour of power, it should be an hour sacred to revenge and to pleasure—let new cares come with to-morrow's new day."
