The Song of the 29th Division

SUNG AT THE CRESCENT BY ROBERT SHIELDS.

Mr. Robert Shields, the English Baritone, scored a decided hit last evening by his masterful rendition of "The Song of the 29th Division." This number is dedicated to men of the 29th Division, of which the Royal Newfoundland Regiment formed a part, and we advise all who had sons or relatives connected with this division to hear the song. Mr. Shields was perfectly "at home" in this selection as it suited his fine baritone voice and was sung with marked expression. His other number was also splendidly delivered.

One of the greatest screen plays ever witnessed in the Crescent is "Rich Men's Wives." Aside from the dramatic side of the story, the production is unquestionably a beauty show. The story has to do with the swagger set of modern society and shows it up in its true light. It's truly great picture enacted by a wonderful cast of great artists, and contains a theme that will live forever. Such pictures as "Rich Men's Wives" are few and far between.

The Crescent has another big Amateur Contest in store for its patrons on Friday night, which promises to be equally as good if not better than any previous one. Watch for Friday's big contest.

The United States army has the largest demolition bomb in the world. It weighs 4,300 pounds complete with nose and tail fuses, loaded with 2,000 pounds of TNT and is 13 feet 6 inches long. This bomb is to be used in a large Handley-Page bombing plane.

Then Pandemonium Reigned

Stories about laughable mistakes made in court by witnesses are common enough, but few are so supremely funny as that told by Mr. Justice Rishy Ewitt one day recently.

It concerned a dull-witted country yokel who had been subpoenaed to give evidence in regard to a motor smash up.

The point in dispute was whether or not it was a collision, but the word collision was too much for the witness, who was obviously puzzled by it. "When two things come unexpected together, that is a collision," explained counsel, and on seeing a sudden gleam of intelligence shoot across the man's face remarked:

"Tell the court what a collision is, so we may all be sure that you understand."

"Twins," was the prompt reply, given obviously in all good faith, and pandemonium broke loose.

Wanted—An Economic Policy

London Morning Post: We live in a fierce world of competition. What a tariff accomplishes is to offer industries some protection against the fierce and nipping blasts of that competition, and to allow themselves at least their own soil in which to grow securely. A tariff is what a wall is to a garden; but the wall is not the only thing necessary; the soil inside must be skillfully tilled by industrious gardeners. But at least this may be said, that until such a wall is built the soil can be no security for any industry in this country under the conditions now prevailing in the world.

"My Friend the Devil"

Shows a Fierce Battle Between Good and Evil Spirits.

Since the world began, the Devil has been used to contrast good and evil. Many the paintings, some that could not be bought at any price today, have shown the Devil in all his devilishness. Our literature is full of the work of the Devil and therefore it is not strange that his satanic majesty has been written into stage plays.

With the advent of motion pictures, it is not strange that we see the Old Boy prancing around doing what evil he can. Yet it must be said for the pictures that the Devil is always beaten when the last flicker of the story appears on the screen. Therefore of motion pictures that they are not the invention of the evil spirit.

All this is called to mind by the new Fox special photoplay, "My Friend the Devil," which is at the Majestic Theatre.

To this the crafty old fellow gets into full swing from almost the beginning of this powerful, dramatic story.

The story opens with a good little boy, a good loving mother and a brutal step-father. One day while the step-father is abusing the mother, the boy prays that the lightning will strike his step-father. Instead it is the mother and not the brutal husband that is killed. The lad turns into an unbeliever and so he grows up, becomes a famous surgeon, marries, and though he is of a kindly spirit, he is disabled to a higher being brings him many sorrows.

Something like twenty years after his wife's death his daughter is to be married. He is happy. He goes to her room to get her birth certificate. Those who are watching the workings of Satan can see him grinning sardonically as the great surgeon goes into the room, for he finds letters which show that his wife had been unfaithful to him. He drives his pretty daughter out into the storm—the daughter dressed in her wedding garments. When she is brought back her reason has fled. The only words she utters are:

"I want my Daddy."

Four doctors are unable to help her. Her father refuses to go to her. Suddenly the spirit of good, in the form of the shadowy figure of the doctor's mother, appears and leads the doctor into the daughter's room. The father works feverishly over the girl. But the great science which he believed was the master of life and death does not bring the girl back to reason. Death walks into the room, and as the girl's heart beats slowly decrease, the figure of death draws nearer the bedside and is hovering over the girl, ready to take her to another kingdom.

In desperation the father calls on God to give him power to save the girl. The struggle between good and evil is short lived. Soon the girl opens her eyes and murmurs:

"Daddy! I knew you would come."

And the father cries:

"I believe."

By this time Satan and Death have gone to other spheres, having waged a fierce but losing battle.

This climax is said to be one of the most stirring that has been given to the motion picture world.

Dominion Status Change is Mooted

LONDON, Oct. 18.—(Associated Press)—Curious rumors are in circulation regarding the status of Wales and Canada, according to the Daily Sketch. The Prince's declared attachment to the Dominion and his promise to return there has occasioned much speculation, the paper says, as to whether a change in the constitution of Canada is contemplated. Some people seem to foresee great developments within the Empire, the Sketch continues, one of them being the elevation of Canada from the status of a Dominion to that of a kingdom.

The story is likely to arouse skeptical laughter here, but the newspaper prints it seriously enough.

An United Front Needed

London Daily Chronicle:—Mr. Baldwin must re-establish his authority or retire. Any attempt to evade that dilemma condemns this country to be of no account in the settlement of Europe. At ordinary times the anarchy within the Conservative party might be of purely domestic interest; in these times it is an encouragement to Europe, in Mr. Lloyd George's phrase, to snub this country out of existence. The unity of the Conservative party is a worthy end, but it can only be maintained by Mr. Baldwin at home, and abroad by the extinction of our deeply-earned influence in European councils, it is not the lamp that was promised us, but a will-o'-the-wisp leading into dark and dangerous places.

Just Folks.

By EDGAR A. GUMST.

SUCCESS.
Here is the road to fame
And fortune's golden smile:
Honor too strong for shame,
Patience to wait the while,
Courage to beat the pain,
Pluck when the hill is steep,
Faith when your strength seems vain,
Never is victory cheap.

Here is the price of worth
And conquest's shining goal:
Hands for the tasks of earth,
And ever a sturdy soul,
Willing to bear the load,
Sowing before you reap,
Daring to blaze the road—
Never is victory cheap.

Here is what glory asks:
Here is what life requires:
Grace at the common tasks,
Patience that never tires,
Men who will slowly climb
Mountainous pathways steep,
Willing to bide their time,
Never is victory cheap.

Pointed Pars

The man who has his price isn't worth it.

Few married men repent at leisure. They haven't the leisure.

Many women avoid hearing scandal by not listening when they speak.

Push by all means. But sometimes people lose more by crowding than waiting their turn.

Always let a woman have her own way—especially if you don't want her to go that way!

It seems that some men joke clubs because they have no homes. Others, because they have.

Many men are sorry for what they've done—but more are sorry for what they've omitted to do.

Some people imagine they are being sympathetic when really they are only being inquisitive.

Most women have two opinions of a secret: Either it is not worth keeping—or else it is too good to keep.

Girls may under-dress now, but they certainly look better than the days when they upholstered themselves.

Many men never deny their wives a single wish. It's when the wives want to realize the wishes that things happen.

OF THE NEWFOUNDLAND QUARTERLY.

Mae Edwards Players

The above players opened the second week of their engagement last night before a large audience, the play being "Her Dangerous Path." Only six persons appeared in the cast, but the six of them did some splendid acting and played their parts in a manner which won rounds of applause from the audience. The play is different from that usually seen, and is the story of an actress who goes wrong and what money can bring—a good time. After she is rescued from her first misfortune and a gentleman lavishes love upon her instead of what the world can give she goes back to her old life, and in doing so practices the grossest kind of deception towards her loyal lover. In the last moment, just before the marriage vows are taken, he hears the gossip of friends and comes back to her, and she in her misery and terror confesses her faults and asks for another chance, but while he is willing to condone the wrong done, he is not willing to forgive her deceit. Both the man with whom she trafficked for soul and the man who gave her his love leave her. She tries to take life but fails, not having the courage and then she goes forth to plunge in sin and iniquity with nothing left her, not even as she says, her soul. The leading part was taken by Miss Edwards as Laura Murdoch, an actress, and opposite her played Jack Corbin, as William Brocton, a N.Y. business man who sought the friendship and intimacy of theatrical girls and invested his money in "shows." Mr. Mr. Newcomb played the part of the one who offered love to Laura; Miss Riggs played the part of Annie the maid. Mr. Murray took the part of the advance agent of the Stock Companies, and Miss Fischer, that of a show girl. The bill will be presented again to-night and on Wednesday night "The Man Between."

On the Wrong Track

SYMPATHY IS SOOTHING, BUT THE "CHEERFUL IDIOT" ADDS TO THE WORLD'S WOES.

There are times when Jones—the name will do—makes my angry passions rise. I know it's wrong, of course, but I can't help it. He's always saying things that, somehow or other, get on my nerves.

Put on his defence, I expect he would claim that he was a cheerful soul, of the type which always sees the silver lining to the cloud. To that I should retort that his cheerfulness irritates. It rubs an already troubled and annoyed fellow-being very much the wrong way.

In this case out of ten sympathy is required rather than cheerfulness. Sympathy soothes. Jones' cheerfulness irritates. He always says the wrong thing at the wrong time.

The other week I lost a favourite dog, naturally, I was upset. Most people would have expressed regret; but Jones remarked with great cheerfulness that I could soon get another pup! That cheered me not at all.

As Bad as "I-Told-You-So"

A gate left open let cows into my garden, and the brutes walked all over my bulbs. Smith was awfully sympathetic; he knows I'm a bulb enthusiast. Jones, however, told me I ought to get a spring fixed to the gate, so that it would close automatically. Good advice, but it merely made me wild.

"Why my little daughter got appendicitis it was the sympathy of various friends that helped me through an anxious time. Jones very kindly told me that it was just as well for a child to have it, because one couldn't get appendicitis twice!

I left in the train a parcel of groceries my wife had asked me to get for her. Smith was sympathetic, and asked if his wife could do anything. But Jones cheerfully remarked that very likely somebody would find it who needed the stuff more than I did!

I dare not, of course, ask poor old "K," who lost his wife a little while ago, what Jones said to him, but it wouldn't surprise me in the least if his cheerful comment was: "Buck up, old man! There are thousands of other women in the world who would jump at the chance of marrying you!"

Are you like Jones? If so, make a change. You are in the same class as those supremely irritating folk who delight in applying the "I-told-you-so" salt to the wounds of their friends.

Why Those Prettier Teeth?

They use a new way of teeth cleaning
Dainty people—millions of them—now combat the film

Wherever dainty people gather you see gleaming teeth today. Cloudy teeth are rarer. Note what attraction those whiter teeth add to men and women.

Learn the way to get them. Accept this ten-day test. Millions now enjoy the benefits. Bring them to your home.

Film hides their beauty

It is film that keeps teeth cloudy—that vicious film you feel. Much of it resists the tooth brush, clings and stays. No ordinary tooth paste effectively combats it.

Soon that film discolors, then forms dingy coats which hide the luster of the teeth.

Film also causes most tooth troubles. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Under old methods, very few escaped troubles caused by film.

New discoveries made

Dental science has now discovered two effective ways to fight film, and has simply proved them out. One acts to disintegrate the film at all stages of formation. The other removes it without harmful scouring.

A new-type tooth paste was created to apply these methods daily. The name is Pepsodent. Leading dentists the world over have long been urging its adoption. Now caring people of some 50 nations use it every day.

Ceaseless protection

Research found other essentials. So Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva, also its starch digestant. Those are Natural agents for fighting acid and starch deposits on teeth. Pepsodent gives them manifold power.

Thus Pepsodent brings the teeth ceaseless protection, and without any harmful scouring.

You will see and feel

The results of Pepsodent are quickly seen and felt. They will amaze and delight you. One week will bring a new conception of what clean teeth mean.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the vicious film. See how teeth become whiter as the cloudy coats disappear.

Then you will realize that all in your home should daily use this method. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel
Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Now use a film combuster which contains harsh grit.
