

A KICK FROM LETHBRIDGE

Says Calgary Loads Undesirables on Southern City

SO LETHBRIDGE HANDS THEM BACK TO CALGARY

Macleod Also Seems to Have Unusual Methods

Lethbridge News:

Lulu Crosby the prepossessing vagrant who resided in luxury for a few days at the Hotel Dallas, and then changed her boarding place to the police station, has at last left the city, and under the care of Mrs. Alexander Thompson, police matron, and V. M. Callaghan, sergeant in the Royal Northwest Mounted Police is speeding on her way to Calgary. Calgary will be pleased to see her again, and it is said that at the jail there they treasured her locks, which she left behind her when she separated from keep-sakes. Miss Crosby will be united again with her friend, Miss Annie Morrison, who lately was a candidate for residence in Lethbridge at the kindly instance of Macleod. Lethbridge, not being selfish, would not keep Miss Morrison, but insisted on returning her to parental Calgary.

Calgary, Medicine Hat and Macleod, according to Harry Percy, the Lethbridge police chief, have lately acquired the pleasant habit of ticketing their undesirables to Lethbridge. Chief Percy thinks it is getting a trifle monotonous and has decided to make a public protest. He says:

Chief Percy's Protest.

"I would like to draw public attention to what is becoming nothing less than a scandal, the action of such towns as Calgary, Macleod and Medicine Hat in using the city of Lethbridge as a dumping ground. It is bad enough to send all a town's prisoners here, as does Medicine Hat, but when it comes to ticketing undesirables here, the matter has passed the bearable stage, and the time is over for exercising charity in passing judgment on the facts.

"Regarding these last two women vagrants, Annie Morrison arrived here last Thursday, and registered at the Windsor. Her character was quickly discovered, and on Saturday she was shipped to Calgary jail. She informed me that when she turned up in Macleod, and was brought before the magistrate, she was given the option of coming to Lethbridge, at her own expense, or being committed to jail for thirty days. She had a little money, and came to Lethbridge.

Bought Her Ticket.

"In Lulu Crosby's case, if the young lady is to be believed the town authorities actually purchased her a ticket, for this destination. She never lived here, and could have no claim on Lethbridge. Both these girls were in jail in Calgary, where their hair was clipped, and when they got out, they were generously unaccompanied to the south of the province. Magistrate Humphries and Major Belcher, inspector of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police, wired from here to Hon. C. W. Cross attorney-general, at Edmonton, on Monday, asking where Alberta's female prison was located, and yesterday the answer came that it was at Calgary. Accordingly Calgary is receiving Miss Crosby back.

Hat Sentences Them Here

"Medicine Hat also has a fetching way of handling its undesirables. There are sentenced on the long enough to make an excuse for sending them to the barracks here, although Medicine Hat has a jail of its own. Naturally when their time is up, they are turned loose on the streets of Lethbridge. Major Belcher informs me that there are at present seventeen prisoners in the cells at the barracks, while the accommodation was only made for six."
