NATIVES POSITION IN S. AFRICA UNION

Under the New Constitution Their Rights Are Safeguarded

refer very well to matters which con-cerned its secret deliberations, but Mr. Schreiner had made certain public statements which were calculated to influence the public. He knew Mr. Schreiner to be incapable of saying anything that he did not believe to be anything that he did not believe to be true, and he recognized the public spirit which prompted all Mr. Schrei-ner's actions. But in this case he could not imagine on what authority Mr. Schreiner made some of his state-ments. For example, Mr. Schreiner said that the disabilities of which he plained were the work of the Natal complained were the work of the Natial delegates, and that the Transvaal and Orange River Colony were indifferent. Now, this was certainly not the case; the delegates of the Transvaal, the Orange River Colony and Natal were united on these proposals.

"Again," continued Sir Henry, "Mr. Schreiner scoffed at the idea that interference in this matter would wreck the Union. Now, I am perfectly certain from my knowledge of the feeling of the delegates, as embodying that of the Colonies, that the Union would be wrecked by such interference. I believe that the proposed Union will improve the position of the natives. I should be the last to interfere with existing be the last to interfere with existing rights, but we must remember that we are by the proposed constitution creating rights which did not previously exist. The proposed Union Parliament will be an entirely new body. Hitherto electors have only voted for the Parliaments of their respective Colonies. This right the qualified natives of the Cane prospessed and the equivalent This right the qualified natives of the Cape possessed, and the equivalent will be the right which they will still possess to vote for their Provincial Assembly. I admit that their status is slightly lowered because the Provincial Assembly of the Cape Colony will not have the powers and position of the old Cape Parliament, but, on the other hand the position of th old Cape Parliament, but, on the other hand, the position of the natives of the other Colonies will certainly be improved by the measures of protection which are afforded them under the new constitution, and which they did not previously possess. Their interests are safeguarded by members nominated for their knowledge of the natives to the Upper House, and they will be further protected by the fact that the Cape Colony members, who may be expected to look after the interests of the natives, and who have native constituents, will form a large part of the stituents, will form a large part of the

"Again, in the new Parliament." Sir "Again, in the new Parliament," Sir Henry continued, "the rights of native voters in the Cape to be placed and remain on the register will continue, and can only be removed by a two-thirds majority of both Houses. This would involve a majority of about 107 members out of a total of about 107 members out of a total of 161, and there is the further safe-guard that Bills embodying the change must be reserved for the signification of the King's pleasure. The rights of existing electors cannot be touched at all. I do not think that in those circumstances the removal is at all likely to take place.

May Be Extended

"Moreover, let us remember this very important point, that while there are those safeguards against the curtailment of native rights, there is no obstacle to their extension. The franchise can be given to the native, and he may be granted the right to sit in the House by a bare majority of the Union Parliament.

"There was one point," pursued Sir Henry, "on which the Cape Delegates

"There was one point," pursued Sir Henry, "on which the Cape Delegates were unable to withstand the argu-ments of the other Colonies who are not yet prepared to give their natives not yet prepared to give their natives the franchise. It was argued that if a native member were returned for a Cape Colony constituency the natives of the other Colonies would be able to make out a strong case of partial treatment. They would say, Here is a native member for Cape Colony actually sitting in the Union Parliament tually sitting in the Union Parliament and helping to govern us, whereas we are not even granted a vote. To avoid this illogical position the Cape members were forced to concede the point that a member of the Union Parliament must be of European descent, though the Cape natives will have still the power to stand as candidates for their Provincial Assembly. Existing rights, then, are safeguarded as far as they exist, and where the native has no political rights his posi-ary authority.

"Had the referendum been taken of the army. immediately after the Bloemfontein Conference, the decision of Natal would have trembled in the balance. Quite a number of reasonable persons, then believed that if Natal stood out Conference, the decision of Natal would have trembled in the balance. Quite a number of reasonable persons, then believed that if Natal stood out the Imperial Government would reject the Act, and that the British population in the other three Colonies would refuse to accept it till Natal was satisfied and came in. The Closer Union Societies of Natal, especially those at Durban and Ladysmith, showed praiseworthy activity in bringing home to Natal the real facts of her situation. The isolationists were driven from a series of untenable positions. Had Natal been an island it would have been otherwise; but as she is an integral part of the subcontinent she could not follow the example of Newfoundland. It would have been impossible for her to exist at all if she had persisted in resusing the solutions of the subcontinent she could not follow the example of Newfoundland. It would have been impossible for her to exist at all if she had persisted in resusing the subcontinent she could not follow the example of Newfoundland. Cape Town, Aug. 31.—Sir Henry de Villiers, K. C. M. G., the yeteran chief justice of Cape Colony, was one of the convention which drew up the terms of the constitution for the South African Commonwealth, and was elected president by that body. He is therefore both from his official position and his great knowledge of constitutional matters—for he is president of the Legislative Council of Cape Colony, entitled to speak with the highest authority on the Union proposals. Sir Henry has been interviewed with reference to the statements on the position of the natives affected by the proposed constitution made by Mr. W. P. Schreiner, K. C., late prime minister of Cape Colony. Mr. Schreiner takes the view that a grave injustice will be inflicted on the natives of South Africaby the terms of the Union, and has gone to London to oppose the passing of the measure by the Imperial Parliament.

Sir Henry de Villiers said that he did not wish to enter into a controversy on the subject, and that, as president of the convention, he could not refer very well to matters which concerned its secret deliberations, put Mr. Schreiner takes the view that a grave injustice will be inflicted on the natives of South Africaby the terms of the Union, and has gone to London to oppose the passing of the measure by the Imperial Parliament.

A Strong Opposition

"Far more vital to the issue was the attitude adopted by the Cape Colony, for exceeding as it does in area as well as in population the three younger communities combined, no scheme of amalgamation from which it stood aloof would have been entitled to the name of United South Africa. The Cape Parliament throughout was the real point of danger, owing to the cynical attitude of Dr. Hofmeyr, the Bond leader. Ever since he delivered his speech in October last, at the banquet of the Closer Union Society of Capetown, it has been plain that the most power-Night Riders' Work.
