The attendance was far below what the play deserves, for a never failing interest is kept up from the rising of the curtain until the close. The leading roles were ably sustained by Mr. Hinds and Miss Ivian Lawrence. The former is a fine type of the Irish actor, while the lady acted her double part as only an artist can do, her rendering of the popular song, "The harp that once through Tara's halls," being especially praiseworthy. Ed. Smith and Miss Emma De Gray sustained their characters in a happy manner. Miss their characters in a happy manner. Miss De Gray sang several songs in a manner which called forth numerous encores. The support was be ter than on the previous night. The play continues throughout the week with a matinee this afternoon and on

Mr. Grady, editor of the Allanta Constitution; "I have seen the field of journalism so enlarged, its possibilities so widened, and its influence so extended that I have come to believe earnestly that no man—no matter what his calling, his elevation or his matter what his calling, his elevation or his opportunity—can equal in dignity, honor and usefulness the journalist who comprehends his position, fairly measures his duties and gives himself entirely and unselfishly to his work. But journalism is a jealous profession, and demands the fullest allegiance of those who seek its honors or its emoluments. Least of all things can it be made the aid of the demagogue, or the handmaid of the politician. The man who uses his journal to subserve his political ambition, or writes with a sinister and personal purpose, soon loses his power, and had best abandon the profession he has betrayed. Within my memory there are frequent and striking examples of men who trayed. Within my memory there are frequent and striking examples of men who have sacrificed the one profession, only to be sacrificed in the other. History has not recorded the name of a single man who has been great enough to succeed in both.

THE SUDDEN DEATH OF A BROTHER. eep for the dead! a brother gone!

Weep for the dead! a brether gone!
It sympathy with thee we mourn.
But it thy sorrow ne'er forget
That Providence, who seems as yet
So stern, with pity views thy grief,
And waits to send the sure relief.
The fairest flowers thus early leave the earth,
And ripest fluits in heaven renew their birth;
Death for a season only separates.
That time will come when through the narrow gates
Of entrance to the life beyond, we too shall go:
There meet those gone before, nor part again in woe,
He who is gone needs not thy tender grief,
Far better he than thou; then be it brief,
"For all must like and die;" tis the decree
Pronounced on man when fall'n from purity:
Therefore weep not, for tho' thy loss be great,
The parting's short, and so commensurate
With thy grief, will be the joy to thee
Of meeting him no more to part through all eternity.

(From the Brooklyn Eagle.) Since Paddy Ryan travelled to New Orleans with a private secretary, who furnished the press with bulletins of his lord's condition, aspiration and measure of confi-dence, the bruiser has become so important condition, aspiration and measure of confidence, the bruiser has become so important a per on that he must have his affairs arranged according to most approved rules of diplomacy. The graceful and highminded Mr. Sullivan, sching to "give somebody a smash in de nose," no longer condescends to walk up to a bar, apply an obscene epithet to a c stomer thereof and so force destiny to provide him with a victim. On the contrary, he sends one of his diplomatic agents to a sporting naper with a deposit agents to a sporting paper with a deposit to challenge somebody to be "licked" in four rounds. Then a "terror" or a "tough" or some other equally gifted plugugly seizes the opportunity of making himself notorious. He, too, dispatches an ambassador to some rival sporting paper, deposits a forfeit, challenges Sullivan and struts round for a week until the first sport-struts round for a week until the first sporting paper's next issue. Once in a while a bully takes up the challenge. The gracious and refined Mr. Sullivan puts up $1000 to fight four rounds with any ruffian who thinks he stand it, and now comes a person enjoying the alias of "Tug" Wilson, recently imported from Englan I without duty, to accept this magnanimous offer. The free American prize fighter has no fear of competition with the pauper rowdies of the effete monarchies, and Mr. Wilson is therefore admitted without custom house scrutiny. There are some doubts as to the reality of Mr. Sulliver's alleged prowess, and Mr. Wilson enjoys a reputation on the other side of the water, that if justified by fact, may lead to a most desirable result. These two men are to meet and exchange blows shortly. Let us sincerely hope that they are both irresistible. If they should in four rounds succeed in knocking each other out of any future possibility of entering a
