specimen of a Letter Received by the La-Among the curiosities which our boys will bring home with them from England are a number of letters received from cranks in different parts of the country, principally relating to the noble red man. One of the most characteristic has been forwarded to The World by its correspondent, and just to show the strange idea some people have formed of poor Lo, by reading Fenimore Cooper and Beadle's Dime Novels probably, it is herewith published:

SPARKBROOK, Birmingham.
SIR: No doubt you will be surprised to receive this letter from a perfect stranger, but I hope you will not deem it impertinence on my part for taking the liberty of writing to you when you are acquainted with my reason for so doing, and I have sufficient confidence in your kindness and courtesy to believe that you will do what I ask as it will be no trouble to you yet will bestow great pleasure upon myself. From my earlier years of intelligence I have taken a great interest in the North American Indians, and to see them again become a powdians, and to see them again become a pow-erful and prosperous but civilized people (yet maintaining their distinctive nationaltyp) is one of the greatest desires of my life. These words but feebly express my feelings, but they will be sufficient for you to understand that animated by these motives, I am stand that animated by these motives, I am anxiously looking forward to your visit to Birmingham, so that I may have the great pleasure and satisfaction of seeing the Indians. But I do not feel satisfied to see them only, and have a great desire to be able to speak to them private-able to speak to them private-able to speak to them private-aking if you will kindly express my sentiments towards them and ask if they will return my friendship by granting me an interview after the game is over on Saturday afternoon at Aston, Birmingham.

I wish you to tell them that my eldest return my friendship by granting me an in-terview after the game is over on Saturday afternoon at Aston, Birmingham.

The situation is high and well drained, with views of the Lake across High Park, and cannot be excelled for healthfulness. With all the rains of the present season there has been no mud and no standing water. The lack of city water, sewers and gas is not felt; for the best of water is obtained at about 20 feet, and the ab-sence of sewer and other gases that thoroughly permeate most of our city houses, bringing death in every form, is a blessing. As for light, no doubt the great number of Railways centering here, and the large Factories springing up all over the west end, will very soon adopt the Electric Light. This done whole streets can be lighted at a small expense.

Before buying elsewhere be sure to inspect these lots and consider well the advantages to yourselves and families of a residence on this estate.
