ARRAIGNMENT OF HOLMES SCENE IN THE COURT ROOM WHEN HE WAS BROUGHT IN.

He Denies That He Killed Pitezel, His Co-accused—Says He Never Forsaking Him—Pitezel's Life Has Wrought a Great Change in His Appearance—Pitezel's

Philadelphia Record, Sept. 24. Self-possessed, but with the prison pallor on his face, Herman Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes, yesterday pleaded not guilty to the charge that he had murdered B. F. Pitezel, and was given until the 28th of next month to prepare his defence. It was the third time that the acknowledged conspirator, now charged with many murders, had been brought into court, having at his last public appearance pleaded guilty to the charge of conspiracy to kidnap the Fidelity Mutual Life Association.

Since Holmes' last appearance in court the sensational discoveries of the remains of the three Pitezel children in Toronto and Indianapolis; the inability to discover the whereabouts of Annie Williams and other persons associated with Holmes, and the charges that he had murdered them one after another, sent thrills of horror through the country, and led to the alleged murder to be looked on as a feat of the worst sort. The Criminal Court and the corridors of the sixth floor of the Public Buildings were consequently crowded yesterday morning with people seeking a glimpse of the notorious criminal, who was brought up from prison to be arraigned before Judge Finletter on the charge of murder.

It was almost 11 o'clock when the impatient audience in the hall of the Court for "Herman Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes," accompanied by his counsel, W. A. Shoemaker and Samuel Rotan, a neatly-dressed, middle-aged looking man of medium build, walked across the room and stepped briskly into the prisoners' dock. He was slightly behind a man in a clipped brown Vaudeville beard, which, by contrast, only heightened the effect of the prisoner's pallor. He was attired in a double-breasted suit of black velvet and wore a turn-down collar and white necktie, and on the whole presented the appearance of a middle-aged, professional man, who would be more at home in a parlour than in the court room defending a prisoner, than in committing any of the numerous and bloody crimes charged against him. Holmes had been put upon the scales before being removed from prison to court yesterday, and his weight showed a loss of 24 pounds during his 10 months at Moynessing.

The Women Called Him "Mec." There were many women in the audience who appeared to be favorably impressed with the prisoner's appearance, and some of them openly expressed the opinion that he was a "real nice-looking gentleman." Holmes, however, appeared to be indifferent to the attention he was attracted to, except once or twice, when he stole a furtive glance around the room, slightly smiling, then resumed his stolid demeanor.

He read the eloquent and musical reading of the arraignment by Court Clerk Kintsey, who has the reputation of being melted by the heat of the sun's rays, had no apparent effect on Holmes, and he only showed his teeth when the arraignment charged in the indictment on the third day of September, 1894, he had inflicted the wounds which caused Pitezel's death. Then came the question: "Pleaded Not Guilty."

What say you Herman W. Mudgett, alias H. H. Holmes, are you a man, in any manner and form as you stand indicted, or not guilty?" For a period of about 40 seconds there was absolute silence, and the eyes of all present were turned on the prisoner. Lawyer Rotan leaned over the side of the box, whispering but two words to the prisoner, "Not guilty." Then the latter broke the silence by replying in a nervous and feeble voice that the clerk could scarcely hear: "I am not guilty, sir."

"How shall you be tried?" asked the clerk. "Again Lawyer Rotan held a whispered conversation with the prisoner, and following the prompting Holmes replied in a tremulous voice: "By God and my country."

"May God send you a safe deliverance," was the clerk's formal reply. This ended the arraignment of the prisoner, and District Attorney Graham immediately arising, asked the Court to fix Monday, Oct. 28, as the time for the trial of the accused, as the case to begin. He stated that the case was one of such peculiar character, and requires the marshalling of witnesses from so many States in the Union that it is important that a definite time in the future be set for the trial.

In reply to the District Attorney Lawyer Rotan said he did not understand that any arrangement had been made for a trial in October, and it was his duty to object. Continuing Mr. Rotan said: "The case is one that has widely divergent in the United States, and these have been so much sensational matter that it is impossible to deal with it in the newspapers as to arouse public sentiment prejudicial to his client, that it would be best to try it in the future. Therefore, I ask that court try to give an extension of time to prepare the prisoner's case."

In reply District Attorney Graham stated that there were reasons why day should be fixed for trial, and he presented the opinion that five weeks was ample time in which to prepare the defence.

As to the publication of sensational reports in the newspapers," said Mr. Graham with considerable emphasis, "most of these reports came from the prisoner and one of his counsel. If they are untrue, Holmes and his counsel are alone to blame. The Commonwealth has positively refused to give out any information from the start, and that policy has been strictly adhered to ever since. The jurors will be sifted by both sides as they come forward, and if any of them have any prejudice or bias they will be disqualified. The fact remains that Holmes will not be charged with any crime other than the murder of Benjamin F. Pitezel, a simple, ordinary homicide. The widow of Pitezel is in an exceedingly precarious condition, and if the case is postponed the State might lose by death this very important witness. This being the case it is imperative that a day be fixed for trial, and I ask that Oct. 28 be set down as the time. Witnesses can be brought from any corner of the country by then."

The bones 1st court. Judge Finletter replied that five weeks was sufficient time for the defence to get its case together; said that counsel had not presented any reason for continuance; that public prejudice would not prevent the minds of the jury, and in the absence of stronger ground for continuance the Court said he would have to deny the motion for a continuance.

The trial of Holmes will probably be the most sensational that has ever been heard in the criminal courts of this city. The bones of Benjamin F. Pitezel will be produced, and Mrs. Pitezel will be called to identify her husband by means of the teeth and other marks. Experts will be called to testify in the case, which promises to unravel the mystery of one of the most cold-blooded murders that has ever been brought to light.

WE and our public—the Mutual Benefit Merchandise Association—are reciprocal.

Great selling makes great buying possible. Great buying makes vast selling certain. Broad gauge trading respects worthy competition and square rivalry. It has equal contempt for vulgar assumption and flippant statements; mere bulk does not secure elegance, vast quantity degrades style. Are harmless sneers against our Jackets and Wraps? Conditions in our mantle business makes us afford the largest care to elegance and detail. Exclusive attention creates exclusive selection, secures styles positively confined to our stock.
