MAGAZINES OF CURRENT OPINION.

THERE is a growing demand for periodicals that cull current literature and current newspaper opinion. The bookseller will find that the reading habits of persons who take a paper of this kind are stimulated.

The Literary Digest (Funk & Wagnalls, 30 Lafayette Place, New York, weekly, $3 per year, 10c. a copy), is a 36-page weekly and a very valuable compendium of the political, religious, scientific and commercial events of the world. It is admirably edited and contains illustrations. Hardly a topic of general interest escapes notice, and translations are made from the French and German and other foreign periodicals. The quotations are always given in the words of the original and are most complete.

Public Opinion is an English weekly along similar lines. It is 2d. per number in England, and the annual subscription is 10s. 10d. It quotes many of the leading British journals on British public questions and is especially valuable for those who, in this country, desire to follow the politics of the Mother Country.

Current Opinion is a new 20-page weekly just started in New York (S. Stanley Schroff, 195 Broadway, New York, $2 a year, 5c. a copy). It covers by quotations from the daily press and the magazines all the current subjects.

The Citizen is a high-class monthly, 28 pages, containing original articles, signed book reviews, literary notes, etc. There is a column of well-selected new poetry. The Citizen is of special value to teachers and educationists. The last issue to hand contains an article on the Ontario school system by Mr. E. W. Hagarty, of Toronto. The paper has been edited by Canadians for some time, Mr. James Tupper, a Nova Scotian, having been lately succeeded by Mr. Skyes, a talented graduate of Toronto University. (American Society for the Extension of University Teaching, 111 South 15th street, Philadelphia, Pa.)

Messrs. C. E. Warwick and John Sutherland, of J. & J. Sutherland, Brantford, recently took a driving tour through western Ontario, going right out to Windsor.
